Edison's Illness.
If Shaw Were Eighteen.
Lady Astor Has A Chat.
Two Broom-Peddlers.
—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

He has caused thousands of millions to be distributed among worker. He has lighted the whole world, the public schools, the scientist's laboratory, the student's library, the mechanic's workshop and millions of homes. He is the greatest, in public service, of all living Americans, fit to stand with Washington and Lincoln.

VOLTAIRE, WHO was no atheist, merely an enemy of cruel superstition, said:

"If there had been no God, it would have been necessary to invent one."

"If there had been no heaven, it would have been necessary to invent one FOR EDISON."

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, 75 years old, leaving Russia, for his comforts in England, says:

"Stalin is one of the world's outstanding personalities. The western world has nothing like him. If I were 18, I would have stayed in Russia, but I am too old to change my domicile."

SHAW'S OPINION does not agree with that of American financiers that lent dollars to the czar and to Kerensky, or the grand dukes and others that used to ride on the backs of Russian peasants, and spent their money at Monte Carlo.

Shaw says anybody can go to church in Russia, if he wants to, and adds:

"Everybody there is too busy working to think of going to church, but for that matter, Christopher Wren's handsome churches in London are empty, too."

LADY ASTOR, who saw Russia with Shaw, says Stalin talked with her 2 hours and 20 minutes "and I'm sure he never talked to anyone that long before." Stalin doubtless enjoyed everyone of the 140 minutes, and got a good deal of sound advice.

Lady Astor expressed deep horror at the proposed hanging of eight young Negroes in Alabama, one of them only 14 years old, on a charge of assaulting white women that were stealing rides in a freight train with the Negroes.

GERMANY THANKS President Hoover for his wheat suggestion, low price and long credit, but will need little wheat. The home crop is adequate. That is the story in nearly every country.

But Germany will be glad to buy cotton from us and copper, too, on long credits, of the "it may be for years and it may be forever" sort.

THAT WILL BE good news for copper men, anxious to see the surplus metal exported, on any terms.

"You undersell me, although I steal the handles, string, broom, everything. How is it possible to undersell me?"

The other replied:

"I steal my broom ready made and save labor. You're not a business man."

If Germany can get cotton, copper and other raw materials, on a pay-as-you-please plan, she ought to do some business, and possibly interfere with Russia's alleged dumping.

THE WICKERSHAM Committee says that political control, meaning gangster control of police in big cities, is "deplorable." Gangster and grafter control of magistrates and judges is also deplorable, but what can you do about it?

The committee should have added that public officials order their police to protect gangster criminals because prohibition and bootlegging make it possible for criminals to gather in millions a year and divide with the politicians that protect them.

ON SATURDAY Mussolini launched the first of two 50,000-ton trans-Atlantic passenger ships. The Italian liners are crowded, while other lines suffer, and Italy plans to push competition.

The Queen of Italy baptized the new ship, the "Rex." Cardinal Minoretti, archbishop of Genoa, scene of the launching, blessed the ship. And some one exploded a dangerously powerful bomb shortly before the launching.

GENOA HAS had several such bombings recently, and within a few days a shipment of fountain pens, each loaded with a high explosive, was sent to Genoa's Fascist headquarters.

If Mussolini can get the [illegible] last chapter will be brief, but such criminals are hardest to detect, and, unlike many others, are usually men

'PHANTOMS' REGISTER AS RESIDENTS OF WARD

Man Named 'Joe' Paid One to Bring Men in; Other Gives False Name

A plot to pad the voters' registry list was revealed today when two men were taken into custody by Special Investigator Peter Connors, of the Registration Commission.

One of the men, it is said, was being assessed under the name of another man, while the second is said to be a man who escorted 20 men to the office for false assessing during the week. Informations charging perjury and subornation of perjury were filed before Justice George B. Shields of Wilkinsburg.

John D. Graham, of the Board for the Assessment and Revision of Taxes, first became suspicious of the men, after five had been assessed. He called Detective Connors, who took into custody two men who said they were John Santarcangelo, 29, of 158 Meadow street, and Carmen Bevilacqua, 22, of 405 Collins avenue.

GIVES FALSE NAME

Santarcangelo, it is said, attempted to be assessed under the name of Joseph Jones, 140 Flavel street, Eleventh Ward.

According to Connors, both men signed affidavits, admitting their activities. Connors quoted the Bevilacqua affidavit as follows:

"I have been bringing in people for about a week to make false affidavit in order that other persons whose names were given me could be assessed and registered. I brought in about 20 in all, including these boys this morning.

"I always used a car owned by a man named Joe. I don't know his last name. This Joe

METER MAKERS CHARGE TRICK

Two companies have refused to submit bids for the more than 5,000 water meters and a large number of replacement parts to be purchased by the city, one of them charging that "trick" specifications for the meters have been drawn to favor one particular company, it was revealed today.

Col. W. R. Dunlap, director of the Department of Supplies, had in his possession five letters from prospective bidders this morning.

Two of them bid for the contract, two refused to even submit estimates, and the fifth firm returned the city's request for a bid without comment.

One of the protesting firms was the Neptune Water Meter Company, low bidder on the contract when it was awarded to Pittsburgh Equitable Meter Company and subsequently held illegal by

Inventor Sees Papers, Goes to Desk, but Is Still Ill

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Aug. 3.—(INS.)—Thomas A. Edison, noted 84-year-old inventor, who is ill at his home here, was sufficiently recovered today to walk from his bedroom to his living room and read the newspapers.

However, a bulletin issued by Dr. Hubert S. Howe, his physician, stated that there was "no marked change" in his condition which has been regarded as serious.

The bulletin said:

"There has been no marked change in Mr. Edison's condition this morning. He asked to see the newspapers for the first time in several days, and is now in the living room at his desk at 1 o'clock."

Dr. Howe in a bulletin last night said he doubted the 84-year-old inventor will ever be out of danger.

King Cancels Races After Seeing Sailor Drown

COWES, Isle of Wight, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—King George witnessed a tragedy today when the second mate of his own yacht, Britannia, was swept overboard and drowned. The yacht, with His Majesty aboard, was on the way to participate in the opening race of the Cowes regatta.

It was a boisterous day, with a choppy sea and the yachts were running close reefed at great speed.

Suddenly it was noticed from the shore that the Britannia had hove to, her head to the wind, as the cry "Man overboard!" was raised.

Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock also hove to and other boats rushed to the vicinity. The Britannia's crew tossed a life buoy, but the seaman could not reach it and disappeared before boats could get to him.

He was Ernest Friend. He was married and had four children.

The race was called off. The King returned to the royal yacht, Victoria and Albert, and flags were half-staffed on all the vessels gathered for the regatta.

HYMIE WITNESS IN CONTEMPT

CLEVELAND, Aug. 3.—Betty Gray, star witness of the state in the trial which sent "Pittsburgh Hymie" Martin to a life term in the penitentiary for the killing of former Councilman William Potter, today was cited for contempt by Judge Walter McMahon, who presided at Martin's trial.

Pittsburgh police were to be asked to apprehend her, Judge McMahon having been informed that she had moved to Pittsburgh since the trial.

She was cited for contempt because of an affidavit she signed to accompany Hymie's plea for a new trial, presented Friday.

In this statement she denied testimony given at Martin's trial, chief of which was identification of him as a visitor at the Parkwood drive apartment where Potter was found slain. She pointed Martin out in court as the man she had seen leaving the building two nights before Potter's body was found.

Her affidavit declared she had testified against Martin because police had threatened to imprison her if she did not.

NEW MURDER SPURS GANG HUNT

2 TOKIO FLIERS FORCED DOWN AGAIN

Land at Fairbanks, Second Failure in Effort to Make Orient by Air Refueling

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—The monoplane Fort Worth landed here at 7:35 a. m. after failing in its second attempted non-stop Seattle-Tokio flight.

The Texas aviators, Reg L. Robbins, and Harold S. Jones, returned here after speeding down the valley of the Yukon toward Unalakleet after an aerial refueling her last night.

Accompanying them was their refueling plane manned by James Mattern and Nick Greener. A second refueling was to have been made at Unalakleet, after which the two planes were to move out over the Behring sea for a second refueling.

The Fort Worth took off from Seattle yesterday at 7:02 a. m. (11:02 Pittsburgh time) and covered the 1,650 miles to Fairbanks in 12 hours and 30 minutes.

The first refueling was completed in 50 minutes and the Fort Worth, with 200 additional gallons of gasoline aboard, swung off toward Unalakleet, weather conditions having proved more favorable there than at Nome, an alternative refueling point. The refueling plane landed, refilled its tanks to their full capacity and followed the Fort Worth.

Favorable weather with possible tailwinds had been forecast for Robbins and Jones by the Weather Bureau in Seattle.

The observer reported a storm of marked intensity southwest of St. Paul Island, in Bering Sea, was moving east by northeast. The forecaster said the fliers' course was north and west of this area.

LINDYS LEAVE CHURCHILL FOR NORTH

Take Off for Short Hop To Baker Lake, 275 Miles Away; May Shift Route

BULLETIN.

OTTAWA, Aug. 3.—AP—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his wife took off from Churchill at 1:45 Eastern standard time, for Baker Lake on the next leg of their flight to the Orient.

CHURCHILL, Man., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, America's premier air vacationists, were ready to hop off today on the fourth leg of their 7,000-mile journey to the Orient.

They had spent a pleasant night in the modern Canadian frontier town which boasts a six-mile seaport. They had been welcomed by the 2,000 laborers and the 11 women of the town, the entire feminine population—when their pontooned monoplane churned its way into the harbor from Moose Factory, Ont., 780 miles east. They have already flown a total of 1,500 miles.

BAKER LAKE NEXT

The Colonel, after a careful check of his plane, said the next stop would be Baker Lake, 237 miles due north. From that point on, there may be a change, the Edmonton Journal said in a copyrighted story yesterday.

The Lindbergh flight so far has been made in good time without untoward incident as far as they are concerned, but anxiety has already been caused to the outside world listening intently for every whisper concerning their progress.

PLANE CHARTERED

It was not until a plane chartered by the Associated Press had flown into Moose Factory and out again that the world knew of their safe arrival there, and by that time, which was yesterday afternoon, the Lindberghs were on their way again, landing later at Churchill.

While the world was worrying about the Lindberghs they were happily going about their work at Moose Factory, preparing for continuation of their vacation flight to the Orient. Working about the ship both seemed delighted with the way everything was going and like a little boy at play Col. Lindbergh removed his shoes and all afternoon went about barefooted.

Canadian Ship Sets New Speed Record

MONTREAL, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—The new 43,500-ton Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Britain steamed into Father Point today, 4½ days after leaving Cherbourg, thereby breaking her westbound Atlantic crossing time by half an hour. The ship also clipped several hours off her Southampton-Quebec time.

ARREST NEAR FOR BABY KILLERS

Eye-Witness Tells How Guns Swept Playing Children; Latest Victim Strangled

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—With arrest of New York's "baby killers" believed near as police tracked down new clues, gangland replied today with another mysterious murder.

While the police were patrolling the "Little Italy" section of Harlem, scene of the shooting of children last week during mob warfare between rival racketeer hoodlums, a policeman, walking his beat near the Queensboro Bridge, saw a bundle which he thought had fallen from a truck. He found that it contained the body of a man who was tentatively identified as Angelo Marino, 30, of Manhattan. He had been strangled and his body tied in two blankets by sash cords.

SLAYERS LEAVE RING

No money was found in the dead man's pockets, but a gold ring had been left untouched. Cards in his pocket indicated he, too, had been connected with Harlem's "Little Italy."

A statement of an eye-witness to the shooting of the five children while they played in a street last Tuesday evening and discovery of a shotgun, a pistol and some whisky in a tenement house across the street from the scene of the shooting encouraged police to announce:

"We feel we know who the gunmen are and we're sure we will eventually break the case."

Special squads of policemen patrolled the district where the shooting occurred, and it was reported the threat of deportation would be used against witnesses refusing to talk. A concerted drive against criminal aliens of the section illegally in this country was also launched.

CHURCHES JOIN DRIVE

Scores of protests against the shooting of the children were voiced in pulpits on Sunday, and demands were raised to drive all gangsters and racketeers from the city.

Police said they hoped to establish that one of the guns found in the apartment near the scene of the killing was used in the street shooting. Giovanni Grimaldi, owner of the five-story tenement where the firearms and whisky were found, said the apartment had recently been vacated by a tenant who had lived in it for years.

He denied any knowledge of the crime, but was held in $1,000 bail for a hearing August 11, on a charge of owning firearms. He was also held under $500 on a second charge of prohibition law violation.

The eye-witness' statement was given to police after a young man telephoned and said he would talk if his identity were kept secret. He was questioned for three hours and gave valuable information, it was said.

UNCLAIMED FIRE DEAD BURIED

Eight coffins holding the remains of the humblest—unclaimed in death as in life—lined the aisle in front of St. Paul's Cathedral altar this morning.

The eight coffins contained the eight bodies, charred beyond recognition, that for 10 days rested in the morgue—unclaimed victims of the inferno that swept the Home of the Little Sisters of the Poor, on Penn avenue, and claimed 46 lives.

All the sad glory of the Catholic pontifical requiem high mass—the same that is sung for kings—swept over them.

BISHOP CELEBRANT

Bishop Hugh C. Boyle, black robed celebrant sang "requiem." The full choir from the high loft far back in the church answered, "requiem aeternam," and "re-

KLINE ENEMIES DEMAND M'GOVERN DECISION ON SUPPORT

COUNCIL BLOC TRANSMITS REQUEST

Commissioner Asked for Action on Ultimatum By Wednesday at Latest

Candidates for City Council, opposed to the city administration, have given County Commissioner C. C. McGovern until Wednesday to decide whether he will accept them on his ticket, according to competent rumor. Their ultimatum said Tuesday but McGovern asked a day's grace, so the story goes.

In the event McGovern decides to confine his activities to the two county commissionerships, the district attorney and the county treasurer, the Councilmanic candidates will immediately begin their campaign that long have been delayed through the bickering of "independent" leaders, the gossipers say.

Candidates for three of the four Councilmanic places to be filled next fall are Councilmen Charles Anderson and Robert Garland, seeking re-election, and former Councilman P. J. McArdle. T. H. Baker, vice president of the Seven Baker Brothers, recently filed nominating petitions for Council and many believe he is McGovern's choice for one of the four places.

Political observers are confidently looking for Deputy Attorney General Ralph H. Smith to announce in a day or two for district attorney with McGovern's approval and for Henry Tranter, manufacturer and civic leader, to declare for county treasurer. Aside from the commissionerships those are the only offices McGovern is believed to be vitally interested in.

State Senator William D. Mansfield has announced for county commissioner and while there is little doubt that he will eventually be McGovern's running mate, the rumor persisted over the week-end that powerful backers of Mansfield were positive that Mansfield would be teamed with County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, who is seeking re-election.

In the early campaign skirmishes, recent retreats by the "independent" group set about to surround McGovern with a complete slate of candidates for all major city and county offices to be filled next fall.

McGovern is said to have balked when he realized that representatives of former State Senator M. G. Leslie attending the "independents" conferences were interested primarily in making the election safe for Leslie's friends now in office, regardless of independent ideals.

W. L. Mellon is expected home from Canada Wednesday or Thursday, and well-informed politicians say that shortly thereafter the Regular Republican organization will announce a ticket headed by Armstrong, seeking re-election, and State Senator James J. Coyne as his running mate.

Coyne's candidacy was indorsed by the Fifteenth Ward Political Club at a meeting yesterday in Odd Fellows Hall, Second and Flowers avenues, Hazelwood, according to Charles Frasco, secretary of the club. Indorsements were given also to M. A. Musmanno and J. J. McGrath, candidates for judge of County Court, and to Joseph N. Mackrell for register of wills.

ST. VINCENT'S RECTOR DIES

The Very Rev. Dr. Ambrose Kohlbeck, O. S. B., rector of St. Vincent Seminary at Beatty, Pa., died early today at the archabbey. He was given the last rites of the church on July 22. He was attended at death by the Rev. Girard Bridge and Brothers Alfonse Thumel and Thomas Pertocy.

Although not in the best of health during the last two years, Father Ambrose continued his regular work as professor of dogmatic theology in the seminary and fulfilled duties incumbent on the rector of the institution, until the end of the last scholastic year.

Father Ambrose was born in Friedrichstahl, Bohemia, December 14, 1869. At 14 he came to St. Vincent and completed his high school and college education. In 1889 he entered the Benedictine Order and was ordained to the priesthood June 8, 1895, by Cardinal Parechi in St. John Lateran Church, Rome.

WORLD FLIERS NEAR SEA HOP

TOKIO, Aug. 3.—(INS.)—Hugh Herndon and Clyde Pangborn, American round-the-world fliers, brought their red monoplane, Miss Veedol, down on the landing field at Kharbarovsk, Siberia, at 3:50 P. M., 2:50 A. M., Pittsburgh time, today, according to a message from Kharbarovsk.

Kharbarovsk, on the Amur River, was the last scheduled stopping place in Asia for the world fliers. They had made the 1,000-mile flight from Chita, west of Lake Baikal to Kharbarovsk, in 18 hours and 20 minutes. When they left Chita they were a full day behind the time of Post and Gatty.

After a brief halt at Kharbarovsk for refuelling, the fliers planned to push on across the Sea of Okotsk and Bering Sea to Nome, Alaska.

quiescat in pace," which is "rest in peace."

Shortly before the time set for the requiem mass, more than a score of nuns of the Little Sisters of the Poor, all that could be spared from care of aged charges, slowly filed into the cathedral, followed by more than 100 old men and women, rescued inmates of the burned home.

CASKETS BORNE

Behind this halting line were borne the eight dark gray caskets containing bodies of the unclaimed victims.

Services for the eight unidentified persons today marked the third time since he has been head of the Pittsburgh diocese that Bishop Boyle has officiated at a Pontifical requiem for laymen. The previous occasions were rites for Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Wall, who had been liberal patrons of the work of the Little Sisters of the Poor.

Bishop Boyle, following the mass, blessed the bodies. He spoke briefly, calling upon the throng to pray for "the repose of the dead." He said:

"These old men and women, for most part friendless, merit your prayers, and I ask your prayers, too, that there shall be no such disaster again visit one of our institutions, or any institution in the city, state or nation.

"They need your help to rebuild and carry on their work again on the Penn avenue site of the Little Sisters. I hope that you will exert every effort to help them carry on."

Members of the Knights of Columbus served as pallbearers.

A woman inmate died at St. Francis Hospital yesterday of pneumonia superinduced by shock, bringing the total dead to 46. She was Mrs. Hanna O'Leary, 85.

Bishop Makes Plea for Fund to Rebuild Home

An appeal for immediate financial aid to make possible a building to replace the Home for the Aged of the Little Sisters of the Poor was made yesterday by the Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of the Pittsburgh Catholic Diocese, at a meeting in the parish hall of St. Paul's Cathedral.

The new home will replace that which was destroyed by fire July 24.

Nearly 1,000 church committeemen appointed to assist in the drive for funds which is to start August 16, attended the meeting.

A nonsectarian committee of prominent Pittsburghers to lead the drive was appointed Friday. J. Rogers Flannery was named as chairman.

Bishop Boyle told the committeemen the relief fund should be at least $300,000 and that the parishes should contribute one-tenth of their educational assessments.

Commander of the Wilkins-Ellsworth Trans-Arctic Submarine Expedition.

By Radio via American Radio News Corporation and Radiomarine Corporation.

ABOARD SUBMARINE NAUTILUS, Bergen, Norway, Aug. 3.—The Nautilus lies at the Norwegian naval base here with last minute overhauling and provisioning in progress in the hope we will get off for our trip to Spitzbergen and the North Pole by Tuesday morning.

We docked our sturdy undersea craft at 5 a. m. yesterday, instead of May 17 as we had hoped when we left the United States for our stormy trans-Atlantic trip.

The Nautilus' superstructure is being made ready for the trip under the ice and our scientific equipment is being put in our cubby hole laboratories.

Our engineers are busy overhauling the machinery. The starboard engine trouble has not yet been located.

Helmer Hansen, the Arctic authority, visited the Nautilus yesterday. He was enthusiastic about the possibility of our expedition doing valuable work in the waters northwest of Spitzbergen.

The Norwegian navy is giving us all possible aid in cleaning up our boat and stowing supplies. All hands are living ashore in naval quarters while this is in progress.

CHOIR SINGER SLAIN, BURIED

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Newton Yarberry was held today in connection with the death of Dorothy Doris Symons, 18, whose body, clad in a bathing suit, was found in a grave of mud and seaweed at the edge of the channel near Aransas Pass Saturday night.

The girl had left her home in Aransas Pass 48 hours before to attend choir practice. Searchers found her body. An inquest verdict reported she met death by strangulation.

Police said Yarberry was the last person seen with the victim. Facing an examining trial Tuesday on a charge of murder, Yarberry was in jail at Sinton, Tex.

MELLON ENDS CITY 'EYESORE'

A country cottage, crear colored, latticed and with re shingled roof, has supplanted th tool shack that the Bureau o Highways and Sewers had bu on Bigelow boulevard, near Kirl patrick street.

The shack had been an eyesore to the thousands of motorists who daily passed it to and from the downtown.

But none except R. B. Mellon did anything about it. Mr. Mellon took a look at the shack hanging precariously on the hillside, he called city authorities and then an architect.

Then, at his own expense—nearly $1,000—the tool shed was built into a shingled, latticed cottage that by next spring will have rose bushes creeping over it.

SHAW RETURNS, WARNS OF SOVIET

Playwright Sees Russia Outstepping England, U. S. in Its Rehabilitation

By T. C. WATSON
Universal Service

EYOT, St. Lawrence, England, Aug. 3.—We've got to look out or we'll be suns.

That in succinct everyday language is the message George Bernard Shaw has brought back to capitalistic civilization after a 10-day visit to Soviet Russia.

AVOIDS LONDON

The famous Irish playwright returned from Moscow yesterday, avoiding London by motoring with Lady Nancy Astor, in whose party he made the trip from Harwich. Shaw continued:

"We—that means the United states as well as non-Russian Europe—are fiddling away our time talking nonsense and acting foolishly while the Soviets are outstepping us in setting their house in order. And what a house it will be when it is finished!

"I guarantee that Russia will leave us all standing still and gaping. Stalin and his commissars have the right idea about the future, while our ideas, especially in England, are so old-fashioned and out-dated that, unless we alter them, there is no future for us—only a regretted past."

"I don't know about the Americans—I have never been to America—but you would never get an Englishman to tighten his belt and work harder than he normally does for less wages. Not he—he would ask:

"'Why should I slave to make more money for a bunch of capitalists so they can gamble in Monte Carlo and Deauville.'

FIRST TO REVIVE

"Russia is going to be the first country to revive from the general mess because they have no bankers, capitalists, brokers, money grubbers, manipulators, or middlemen of any sort. The Russians are all workers and producers. Everybody in Russia has agreed to tighten their belts and work for the five year plan.

"They are doing it efficiently and anybody is a fool who says they will not emerge triumphantly.

"But you have to give the worker some hope of reward and encouragement at the end of his increased tasks. The Russian workers are promised an equal share of the fruits of their labors."

Asked what these fruits were, Shaw said:

"Better houses, better food, and better opportunities for enjoyment. Its true they have not those things now, but that unhappy condition is a relic of Czardom."

ANTI-DRYS FAIL, SAYS W. C. T. U.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—(INS)—Both Republican and Democratic parties will be strongly dry in 1932, if national political leaders heed the results of the wet drive in 41 state legislatures that met this year, the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union announced today.

The dry organization boasted that the campaign to "smash prohibition state by state is a fizzle." It declared every movement to repeal state prohibition laws had ended in failure and chided the anti-drys for confining their efforts to either petitioning Congress for repeal or passing non-mandatory "referenda" which have no effect on existing law.

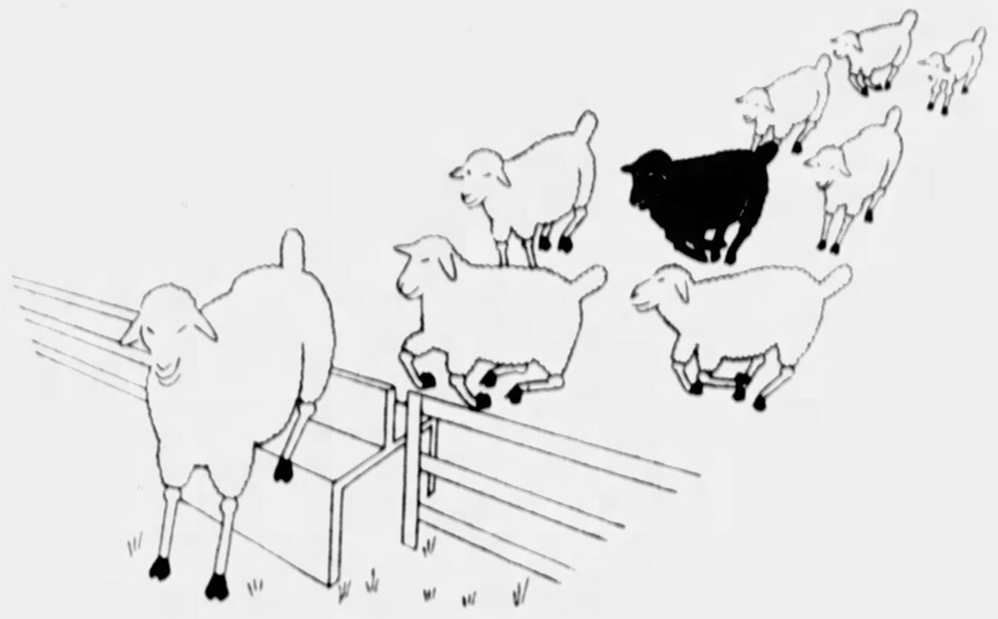
Showers of Toads Free Town From Insect Pests

IPSWICH, S. D., Aug. 3.—(AP)—The lowly toad gets thanks from Ipswich.

Coming here with thousands of companions, more than have been seen in Ipswich since the great toad days of 1921, this unbeautiful creature is saving men money.

The toads, so many that they even live in the cellars, feed mainly upon millions of bugs and similar small pests. In turn, serving a sacrificial purpose, they become feasts to chickens and ducks.



They Now Follow the Leader

THE stores that told you a short while back, with raised eyebrows, aloof manner and "holier-than-thou" attitude, "We do not sell on installments," are now adopting the installment plan. The reason is simple. They are forced to sell furniture the way people want to buy it, and over 90% of you want to buy furniture on liberal credit.

Furniture is not a luxury, nor is it exactly an expense. The buying of furniture is an investment in home happiness. It is one of the chief commodities whose purchase on the deferred payment plan is highly endorsed by the most conservative economists.

Nathaniel Spear knew all this 38 years ago. When he opened his first little store over in Wood Street, he pioneered the selling of good furniture on a liberal plan of dignified credit. His system of selling made it possible to enjoy not only the necessities, but also the refinements of daily life while conveniently paying for them out of income. Today there is scarcely an article under the sun that is not being sold on the installment plan.

The Spear plan of credit has received universal commendation. It has proved itself to be economically sound. It has made Spear's one of America's largest furniture institutions. It has brought loveliness, comfort and convenience into millions of homes. It has brought employment to thousands of people. Surely there is something vitally beautiful in the use of credit when it is properly applied and never abused.

And now they are ALL following the leader. Stores that formerly derided extended payments are now on bended knees offering terms. They are now imitating the Spear Plan, but everyone knows that imitations are seldom as satisfying as the original.

Spear's has decades of experience in the selling of home furnishings on credit. Millions of dollars in resources protect your purchase and guarantee your satisfaction. A very flexible and sound credit policy permits the arrangement of terms to suit each customer's own particular requirements. Furthermore, Spear's Bond of Security guarantees complete protection in case of illness, unemployment or death.

We publish these facts now because they are pertinent to Spear's Great August Sale of Furniture, which offers the most beautiful and lasting furniture at the greatest savings in the history of

NATION LACKS LAWS TO FIGHT RACKETEERS

Federal War on Gangsters Limited; Show Impotence In Capone's Long Regime

By EARL J. SHAUB

United News Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Keen interest was aroused in government circles here today over the demand of William Randolph Hearst for concerted action to stamp out crime and racketeering throughout the country.

Although there was no official comment, since the heads of departments concerned are out of the city, officials old point out the need of more and stronger federal laws for dealing with the problem.

Congress, it was stated, will be asked, possibly in the next session, to pass such laws that will give the government weapons for dealing with racketeering, it was stated.

GOVERNMENT'S HANDS TIED

At present the federal government can only strike at gangsters and racketeers indirectly. It has no laws to stop gangsters from exacting tribute from business and individuals from kidnaping wealthy men and children from bombing homes and factories or even from committing murder.

These can only be dealt with by the states, where officials are often lax.

The federal government's only effective "club" until the gangsters are given [illegible] charges of dodging their [illegible] the tax conspiracy or violation of the prohibition laws.

CAPONE CASE EXAMPLE

This is a serious job as was [illegible] in the case of Al Capone. More than a hundred agents worked for two years before they got an all-tight case against him and his clever lawyers and brought them to trial for breaking the tax and liquor laws.

It is feared here that these agents will [illegible] in the case of [illegible] engaged in running [illegible] while another group has gone to New York to get racketeers there on the same kind of indictment.

But it is realized that this is not enough and that the federal government should have as much power to [illegible] the states [illegible] something like public against [illegible]

WAR ON GANGS BACKED HERE BY JUDGES

U. S. Attorney Expresses Hope City and County Prosecutors Will Work

Two Pittsburgh Judges and a former federal prosecutor, a former Morals Court magistrate and the head of Carnegie Institute here today joined in nation-wide indorsements of William Randolph Hearst's editorial Sunday, in which he called for federal, state and municipal force against racketeering.

Judge Ambrose B. Reid of Common Pleas Court said:

"We are asked what are you going to do about it."

My answer is: Every good citizen should support the arm of the law in putting down the present terrible lawlessness; that every good citizen, instead of carping at the court, should be back of the court enforcing the law in every instance in which the welfare of our people requires its enforcement."

JUDGE'S VIEW

Judge Frank P. Patterson of Common Pleas Court:

"The tragedy that inspired Mr. Hearst's comment upon governmental disregard for the destructive warfare that the racketeer is waging upon society has appalled the heart of the nation.

"This editorial appeal ought to rouse every police power, every local, state and federal agency and every citizen to active combat to the end that the racketeer and his political confederate will be exterminated.

"If the police do their part, I am certain the courts will welcome the opportunity of co-operation."

John D. Meyer, former United States Attorney:

"I'd like to see someone, preferably the District Attorneys in the various counties, assume the responsibility of cleaning out the rackets. And I'm glad to see someone like Mr. Hearst who has the courage to point out this responsibility.

NEVER BEATEN

"No one outside the rackets ever beat us, and I don't see why anyone inside should.

"We have the difficult situation of having no one in the various counties upon whom falls the executive responsibility—there is no chief executive. I'd like to see the District Attorney assume it and see how it works out.

"If necessary, there should be a policeman at every racketeer door to stamp out racketeering."

A. D. Brandon, former Morals Court magistrate:

"The greatest cause of racketeering is the unholy alliance between racketeers and ward politicians. The greatest evil effect is the domination of the metropolitan police department. Another cause for the increase of crime in this country is the antiquated system of criminal jurisprudence.

CRIMINALS FAVORED

"In spite of frequent mending of our laws there are 22 ways in which the law favors the criminal. There are a great many criminal cases where the question does not involve the innocence or guilt of the defendant, but hinges on some legal or technical point. What we need is less law and more common sense in our criminal jurisprudence, and in my belief the only remedy for this situation is the deportation of alien criminals, the cutting of the bond between police department and politics and the modernization of our laws to meet present-day conditions."

Col. Samuel Harden Church, president of Carnegie Institute:

"The crime wave that is sweeping over this country is appalling and it threatens to engulf American civilization in its growing power.

"A temporary restraint might be effected if all the good citizens of each city would get behind their police departments with moral support and a firm insistence on the swift punishment of these bandits.

"But police restraints can only scratch the surface of this problem, for we know that the fundamental cause of this horrible orgy of corruption, crime and murder is prohibition and we can never restore law, order and decency in this country until the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed."

HORNE'S

AUGUST, 1931, promises to be long remembered as the August of low prices. In the opinion of many, including Babson, Ayres, and other recognized economists, the bottom appears to be reached in many lines, and upward tendencies are beginning to show themselves.

Now appears to us, who have watched developments carefully throughout the long period of price decline, to be the great moment for decisive action. Accordingly we have plunged into the market with all our resources to turn the situation to the utmost advantage of our customers and the general public.

We have gone far beyond the customary August Sales of Furniture, Furs, and Bedding, and sought like opportunities in every type of desirable merchandise available.

Quality is NOT down—only price. With spot cash to drive our bargains, we have provided regular Horne qualities, chosen with our customary taste and discrimination at prices that will set the town talking as has no event before in the history of this store.

Every department is in the picture. The August opportunities tell their own story better than we can. Come tomorrow. See the Furniture, Furs, Bedding, Women's and Misses' Coats, Manhattan Shirts, and the Market Opportunities in every department. Buy NOW and SAVE!

August prices that fully justify women's buying winter coats at this time! We have taken advantage of what we believe to be the lowest fur and fabric prices of the year to give women beautiful coats of the highest standards, and have shortened our mark-up to the vanishing point to assure August purchasers values that will not be equaled in regular season.

We are employing this August Sale as an introductory feature to a great fall and winter coat season in which this store plans to play an outstanding part. It represents our best efforts in the manner of styles, fabrics, tailoring, assortments—everything which makes for coat leadership.

Finest Fabrics and Furs

All the finest new fabrics for fall and winter are represented. There are [illegible] misses' models, and 47 women's and small women's models. More than 20 furs are represented in the generous trimmings—Eastern Mink, Kolinsky, Persian Lamb, Fox, Hudson Seal (dyed muskrat), Jap Mink, Fitch, Badger, etc. The fur trimmings are one of the most impressive features of the new fall and winter coats.

Things I Never Knew Till Now

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 3.

Can I afford it?" they say decisively.

One atmosphere man who has been an extra for seven years and who draws his pay states the case quite well.

"I'd like to get married," he says, "but I can't plan ahead. I can't tie myself to any payment contracts or a house lot or furniture. When times were better I've made as much as $150 in one week. But the next week I might make $70. And these days it is more likely to be the smaller figure."

Lois Moran

The sweetest of them all declares absorb a certain amount of harshness after they've been in the business for any length of time. And moreover, they wouldn't respect us. They'd see us ordered around the set too often by second and third assistants. It's a different thing when a man works in an office and can come home and brag about what he's done during the day."

The percentage of married extras is much greater among the women. Dixie Allen, of Central Casting Bureau, says. It may run as high as 60 per cent. This is due, in the girls' case, to the fact that they apply for work after they're married.

Not all extras look on marriage as a serious matter. Some have been married and divorced a number of times.

"The men are too self-centered," they say, "you couldn't stand them as husbands."

Several of the girls are ready to defend the men. It's outstanding, they argue, that a small way producer makes a living. Even a stingy fellow. All the extras are attracted to Central Casting on Vine. Natural attractions are studied scrupulously. Small wonder, too, that extras so many tragedies and romances.

NARROW ESCAPE

Lois Moran and Ralph Bellamy came very close to death last week when the driver of a studio location car was stricken with a fatal attack of paralysis. They were on a precipitous road near Chatsworth headed for the scene of the day's work on the Jack Gilbert picture. Suddenly the driver was stricken. True to his trust he managed to cut off the ignition. Still in gear the car slowed up and was stopped by an overhanging limb of a tree. Fifty feet away was the brink of a precipice.

LATEST GOSSIP

Some thought it was a gag, but Universal was selling the gospel truth. Many people have inquired whether "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" will be a talkie. The sequel to "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" will be Nancy Carroll's comeback picture. It's a story of Paris, and is still high-hat. They say. With the coming of Ann Harding, Leslie Howard will go to London to do a play. He doesn't plan to be back before December.

Scouts Make Knights' Armor from Tin Cans

When a girl can find a [illegible] scout camp, campers can find a dozen answers.

A tin can in the hand of a Girl Scout may become a handsome helmet for an armored knight to wear [illegible] a dramatized battle or it may become an artistic lantern to light the troop house after dark. It may become a flower pot or a [illegible] butterfly, or it may merely remain a dry container to be used in the camp pantry or on the hike.

When Tennessee "Lady of Shalott" was recently presented on the lake that separates the national leaders' trading camp [illegible] Mary from the Girl Scout Camp Andree at Briarcliff Manor, with the student leaders and the [illegible] girls participating, all of the armor worn by the knights as well as the colorful costumes of the ladies of old England were made at the two camps.

The helmets were constructed from [illegible] tins that had been flattened, hammered out and polished into shining headgear fit for any Sir Galahad. The breastplates came from the same humble origin.

No tin can is ever cut open, emptied and forgotten by a Girl Scout who knows her health[illegible] and her sanitation. If there is no need for a new gadget in the form of [illegible] or an ornament for the next campfire [illegible] are around the campfire a tin can is buried in the cemetery planned for the proper disposal of [illegible]. Because a flattened tin takes up less room and will not hold water to make a breeding [illegible] for mosquitoes, each can is hammered out like a pancake after it has been washed free of all food.

Stage Keeps Her Promise To Sing For Attache's Aide

MEXICO CITY. A promise given in a social scrape to Ambassador J. Reuben Clark, Jr., a year ago by Merion Telva, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, was kept by her recently when she appeared at a private concert at the American embassy here.

The contralto who visits Mexico periodically made the promise while attending a reception given by former Ambassador Dwight Morrow. She informed Clark she would sing for him at the embassy if it became ambassador.

Estes Clark succeeded Morrow as ambassador to Mexico, and Miss Telva kept her promise at first opportunity.

She sang arias from several operas to a select gathering of guests including Mexican government officials and most of the diplomatic corps.

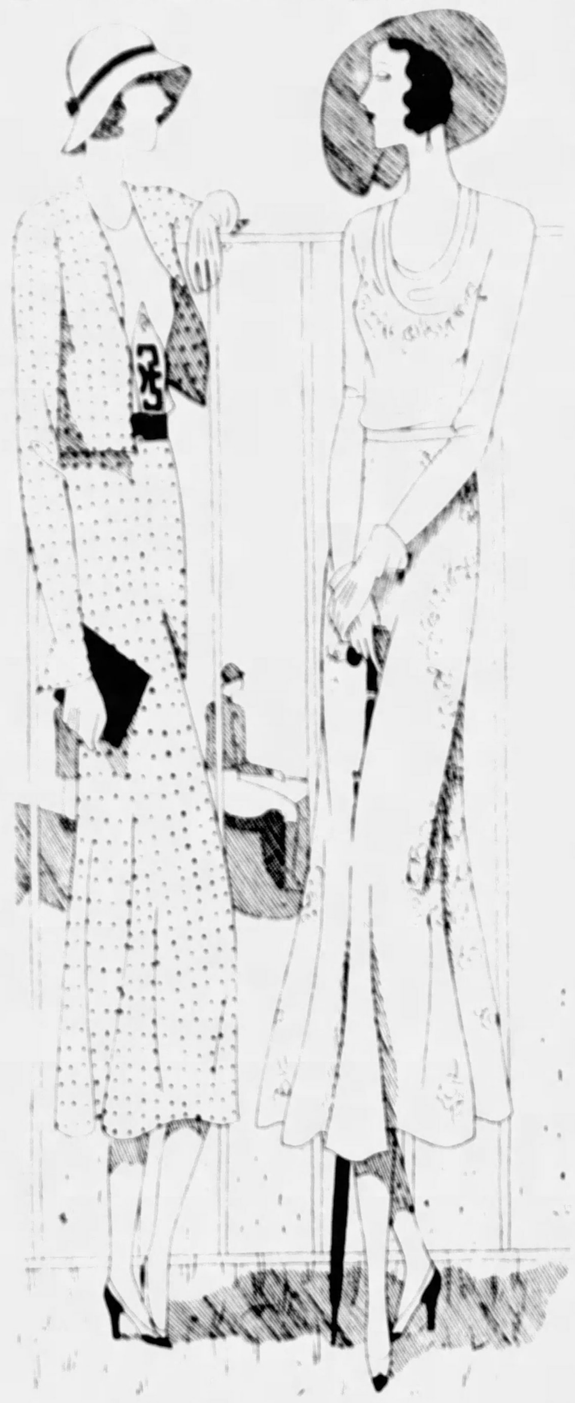
BLACK AND WHITE IDEAL FOR SMART RACING EVENTS

Sketched in Paris



Mrs. Charles Sheldon Parsons, of Manhasset

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

PARIS, Aug. 3. At the races, when in doubt you may play black with white. This season we have seen ever so many smart black and white outfits with the accessories continuing the color combination. One sees every type of costume at a smart racing event. At the fashionable Ascot meet in England, long trailing skirts, flower muffs and parasols are in their glory. But women here seek chic and smartness and are well aware that it can also be ensnared within the confines of a simple but effective outfit that verges on the semi-sports type. The more dressy costumes are also seen, both very elaborate and restrained, relying on color contrast, cut and clever detailing.

TODAY'S SKETCH affords an interesting glimpse of the recent French Derby at Chantilly. The ladies talking together are Mrs. Blake, who is chatting with Mme. Martinez de Hoz, presumably about horses, since the latter lady had several entries in that event. Mrs. Blake wears the black and white dotted shantung suit with a white bodice encrusted with black. Her severely tailored white panama has a single narrow band of grosgrain ribbon. Her purse is black antelope and her pumps are of white antelope and black patent leather. A smart yet practical exposition of black with white.

MME. MARTINEZ DE HOZ wears a Vionnet frock of chartreuse georgette with a hand-locked pattern of flowers. Her hat of matching color is trimmed with two tones of chartreuse ribbon. Her shoes are white and the white antelope gloves are trimmed with [illegible]

Fair Play Means More Than Beauty Treatments

Should a girl marry a man younger than herself?

Or would she be ruining his life and letting herself in for a lot of grief?

Caroline wanted to know how loved Bill and he loved her. They wanted to marry.

What difference do a few years make, he argued. So long as we love each other.

And Caroline wanted to believe him. But—

Don't do it! shouted the Aunt Chorus, consisting of mom and dad and all the neighbors. "Don't even think of it."

SEES OBJECTION

And Kerya agrees with me:

"It's utterly foolish, see she, for any woman to marry a man younger than herself. Don't we women have enough trouble as it is, trying to stay young and pretty in order to hold those flapper-chasing modern men without giving them the temptation to go out of being older than (he) are when we start out together."

Well, I have a friend right now who is 10 years younger than her husband, but that doesn't keep him from looking around at 46 for a younger and peppier charmer. And she hasn't let herself go either. She spends plenty on beauty treatments and buys good up-to-date clothes and still he isn't satisfied. I hate to think of how things would be if she were say 50 instead of 36.

This Bill of Caroline's may think now that age doesn't make any difference because she is still young and full of life. But what will happen when the crow's feet begin to show on her face and she is no longer as lively as she used to be?

A DIFFERENT OPINION

I am right here to tell you that I wouldn't risk it. It's all too likely that he'll look at her and then look at himself and think what a fine young figure of a man he still is and what a pity it is that she, too, isn't one. Hasn't it happened that way often enough to warn off any girl with sense?

Yes it has happened that way often enough, sister, but before you get too sure that it always happens that way, listen while Naomi gives you a peep into the other side.

"I certainly must waive your appeal on that question of whether or not a girl should marry a man younger than herself," she starts her letter.

First of all I want to tell you that I have two girl friends each three years older than their husbands. One couple has been married for five years. They are as devoted and happy as any couple I have ever seen. The other couple has been married for 14 years. They have seven beautiful children and they too are contented and happy.

And last but not least, I am seven years older than my husband although I do not look it, feel it or act it. I am still full of life and fun and the spirit of adventure, while he is rather more settled and quiet. We have been married for 10 years.

In ghosts of today years. We always go about together and we are congenial in our tastes.

A SQUARE SHOOTER

We like all outdoor sports, auto trips, good shows and good music. We both enjoy our home and a few intimate friends. We love children and animals and the most perfect the spiritual side of life either. Our friends have said that our marriage is the finest love match they have ever seen. We are just as devoted and happy today as we were when those 10 ghosts years began. We are proud of the way we live and what we mean to each other. So I am sure you, too, can be sure. It isn't the years that count. It's the spirit. I haven't beauty or any special talent. I am just a square shooting pal to the finest husband in the world and I feel as if we were on an everlasting honeymoon. I hope you will print this so Caroline can see it.

So there you are. Is it really age that makes the difference or something else?

Personally I suspect it's something else. I suspect that women pay far too much stress on bathtubs and beauty treatments in marriage and far too little on friendliness and fair play.

If we spend as much time polishing up the old brain as we do polishing our nails . . . if we worked as hard building up companionship as we do preserving our complexions, we wouldn't have to worry about the calendar.

The Age Agony is mostly a state of mind.

How to Keep Well

Pneumonia Takes Toll of Young and Old Alike

Pneumonia is one of the most dreaded of human ailments. It is a disease of great significance since it takes a great toll of the aged and of the very young.

Dr. Copeland

Sir William Osler aptly described this disease as "Captain of the Men of Death." Pneumonia accounts for about 10 per cent of the deaths in a community. It does not respect age, sex or locality.

Pneumonia has been known ever since man has been subject to disease and suffering. Its prevention has been greatly advanced, but little progress has been made in its treatment.

Within the past decade, research work has been conducted into the cure and treatment of this disease in relation to any other infection. Great impetus was given to this work during the World War.

Under the guidance of the Rockefeller institute new knowledge concerning pneumonia has been developed. As a result of this work, it has been definitely determined that there are four types of pneumonia.

More than half of all cases of pneumonia are of the so-called Types I or II. Type III is the most severe type and fortunately only about 10 per cent of cases belong to this group. Group or Type IV is spoken of as the miscellaneous group, in which about a third of all cases of pneumonia belong.

Most outstanding in the work at the Rockefeller Institute has been the development of a curative serum. The serum differs according to the type or group of pneumonia. Animals inoculated with these serums develop an immunity or resistance to pneumonia.

This method of treatment has been applied to humans. In many cases it has been more than successful. In other cases it has been disappointing in its results.

Further study is required before this desirable and much needed treatment is perfected. It is hoped that we will soon be more capable of combatting this disease and reducing its mortality rate.

Nature's Laws Chastise the Unworthy Despite New Tolerance—Fay King

PEOPLE DON'T THINK THE WAY THEY USED TO ABOUT SUCH THINGS.
SHE GETS MORE SYMPATHY THAN THE CHILDREN AND I DO!
FAY KING
SOONER OR LATER THEY PAY THE PENALTY

By FAY KING.

In this day of misplaced tolerance we must not criticise anything unworthy.

We must be gentle and generous in our opinion of women who break up happy homes and make children suffer.

We must be broad-minded and enthusiastically look upon the side of "self-expression," which is only selfishness.

We must be fair—oh, so fair!—to whom? To deserters, slackers, sneaks and shirkers of life's responsibilities.

Well, we may abide by these new rules, and be the cheer leaders for cads and cowards, but I notice the law of compensation still works in its own wise way.

Look over a list of those of whom you know who have defied it. They have paid. They are paying in a way that hurts them most.

Maneuvers Point to Possible Attempt at Bank Robbery

Continuation of Loves Reawakening

There was respectful though amused admiration in the eyes of all our little group as the Chief (the name we all accord my father) finished his account of the blue sedans stay in Sag Harbor and asked us what we made of it.

Harris Underwood was the first to reply and he did not directly answer my father's question until he had fixed his mind of a thought which I surmised had come to all of us.

"Where," he elucidated, "we call ye Chief and we do well to call ye Chief. That's an awful persona. I know but please dela the poisoned arrows. But that's a nifty piece of work. I'm broadcasting getting all that dope and I'll bet without arousing the suspicions of a single native that you were otherwise than just naturally inquisitive."

"You do me more than justice," my father said smiling. I simply went to my friend, the cashier of the bank. He has lived here all his life and he has a very creditable secret service of his own. It didn't take him long to check up on the sedan from all angles. But you haven't answered my question.

"Well," the tax man said slowly, "I hate to be melodramatic but it looks to me as if there might be an attempted bank robbery in Sag Harbor."

"It has all the earmarks," Dicky asserted. "Scouting around to see how the streets lie, the best approaches to the bank and how it looks inside."

"But why should they spend any time in North Haven?" Lillian asked. "That's a regular cul de sac; no way of getting back except by a narrow bridge; no way of getting off the other end except by that infrequent ferry to Shelter Island and no way of getting off that, except by another infrequent ferry to Greenport."

"Perhaps to give the impression that they were calling on friends in North Haven," I said.

Perhaps," my father said enigmatically and I wondered if he had some other theory that he was not yet ready to voice.

"But it doesn't matter much what they did. The main object of their coming is already thwarted. The men at the bank are prepared. The first sign of a suspicious movement on the part of anyone, whether belonging to that crowd or not, will be the signal for a reception which I do not imagine will appeal to them very strongly."

He smiled grimly as he finished, and Lillian, who has no awe of anyone in her mental makeup, put up her hand in a whimsical salute.

"At-a-boy, Chief!" she said. "For a thorough job, commend me to you. And where do we head in from here?"

"Nowhere, for the present," he answered, smiling at her, "except to keep up the precautions for the guarding of the farmhouse from any attempt of either the Chinese or the other fellows to molest it, or any of us. For tonight and tomorrow I fancy we three, to look at Harry and Daisy and Jim, ought to be sufficient to deal with anything especially as I have arranged with the state troopers to watch out for any rail from us. We'll simply have to sit tight until we find out whether our suspicions concerning the purpose of the men in the blue sedan are correct."

Then Lillian rose and stretched her arms above her head. "What's the matter with shelving the worries and snatching a shower and a siesta before dinner? I'll promise to make it as short as you please but I must close my eyes for a few minutes if I'm going to do full justice to Katie's food."

I quickly went across to her, tucked her arm in hers and went with her toward the stairway, handing all ammunition back to our husbands and my father, who had risen with their usual politeness (courtesy).

"Don't get so absorbed in talk that you forget the dinner bell!"

As may forget all our wives and their relations. Harry Underwood boomed, but never Katie's food. My mouth's watering already. But we beat you to the trough for all your timely warnings.

That to his rough raillery he was camouflaging the hurt he had received from his wife I knew, realized that Lillian knew it too when she drew me inside her room and, with lips which trembled in spite of a tremendous effort for self-control, whispered tensely:

"Do you think he'll ever forgive that awful thing I said to him?"

I took her by the shoulders and shook her tenderly.

"Do you know your husband so slightly, then?" I asked. "He has forgiven you fully already."

"But he hasn't forgotten?"

"Could you expect him to forget a thing like that immediately?" I countered, for I knew the futility of pretending to a woman of Lillian's mentality that her speech concerning her husband's having "no right" to forbid Marion anything was not atrocious. "But he will forget it absolutely in time, if you never repeat the offense and do your best to erase the memory of your mistake today. But above everything, don't brood over it. You surely have enough to think of just now without dwelling on something which cannot be helped now."

I knew it, she agreed. "However can we sleep tonight?"

I silently repeated her question but though I am sure she heard midnight strike with me, she was as sound asleep as I, she told me later, when at 3 in the morning the telephone shrilled an imperative message.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Showers for the Bride

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My friend thinks that a bride who is going to have a large church wedding should not have a shower as it is incorrect etiquette. I think that it is perfectly all right for the bride-to-be to have a shower. I have never heard that a shower is improper under these conditions and I would like your opinion of this. F.

There is no rule or even suggestion about the giving of showers that would make the giving of a shower incorrect when the bride-to-be is planning to have a large church wedding. I can't see what difference this would make. There are many instances in which the giving of showers is not in good taste, many instances but these are always obvious ones such as the giving of a series of showers by close relatives of the bride-to-be.

A Kindly Thought

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A friend of my husband and also my friend, passed away. The body was immediately taken to another city for burial. We did not send flowers. Now is it appropriate for us to send a basket of flowers to the mother and daughter on their return to the city, as they are friends of ours also?

MRS. T.

This would be a very kind and thoughtful thing for you to do, and I am sure that your friends would be deeply touched by your thought of them. I suggest that you do not send a basket of flowers, but instead a box of flowers. And with the flowers I suggest, too, that you send a note telling of your sympathy and of your friendship and of your wish to serve, if your friend will permit you to do anything that will make life easier for her.

Better No Card at All Than a Printed One

1. I am enclosing two calling cards. One reads "Miss Louise Collins" and the other "Mildred Murray." Will you please tell me which is correct?

2. Also, when you are making a business call over the telephone should you identify yourself as Miss or Louise Collins?

READER.

1. The visiting card with Miss on it is correct. It is terribly poor form . . . not form at all . . . to have a visiting card without a title.

Neither card is very good-looking. The one with Miss on it is printed and we just mustn't use printed visiting cards. As I always say in this column, it is far better not to have any visiting cards than to use printed ones. And a plate equals very little and lasts until you change your name. Too, the Old English style's not much used on visiting cards nowadays. Script is always good and most popular now is headed Antique Roman. The style of the other card is a short form of letter and therefore shouldn't be used.

2. Miss Collins is the form for the business call.

TRUCKS BRING END OF OLDEST RAIL LINE

Road Built in 1829 Gets Permit to Quit Due to Competition of Motors

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—The oldest steam railroad in the country has succumbed to motor truck competition.

The Interstate Commerce Commission today authorized the Delaware and Hudson Railroad to abandon 14 miles of its Honesdale branch. The road built about 1829 was the first over which to run the Stourbridge Lion, the first locomotive to pull a train of cars.

The road extends from Honesdale Junction to Carbondale, Pa. Today's order authorized abandonment of all except the section on the Carbondale end of the line.

The road originally was built to tap coal deposits of the Pennsylvania region. It has been operated at a loss for several years and the commission said:

"The road seems in the main to have outlived its usefulness."

It added that coal traffic for which the road originally was built, has been driven to the northeast by the railroads and now so much of the other traffic is moving by motor truck that what remains for the railroad is wholly inadequate for its support.

Passenger traffic on the line was abandoned several months ago and freight trains have been operated only three times a week.

HOPE IN RADIO SEEN BY KLEIN

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Radio was set forth last night by Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, as holding strong hope for keeping men and money busy during the next decade.

Klein, in a radio address, cited past economic depressions and the parts played by other industries in recovery from them. He pointed to the growth of the railroads as helping to overcome obstacles after 1873, and more recently, the automobile after 1921. He said:

"Clambering as we are, up from the 1930-31 visitation of like unpleasantness, it would not be unlikely that the growth in new household electrical appliances, such as the radio, may help materially to keep men and money busy during the next decade."

CHINESE FLOOD DEATHS MOUNT

HANKOW, China, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Floods claimed scores and possibly hundreds of new victims today when the Yangtse and Han Rivers, after slightly receding for a few days, overflowed their banks again.

Dikes crumbled before the rushing waters and large sections of the city and its environs, previously undamaged, were inundated. Twenty square miles of truck gardening land from which Hankow obtains vegetables its main summer food dependence, were flooded. Grave fears were expressed the city would suffer severe famine in the autumn and winter.

Last week vast areas of Central China were under water when the Yangtse and other rivers overflowed following continuous rains for a fortnight.

Paralysis Victims To Receive State Aid

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Announcing on its plan to combat the outbreak of infantile paralysis in the state, the Health and Education departments of the state have notified all upstate Children's Court Judges that on order from them state aid would be given for medical and hospital treatment of patients.

Many Fish Killed; Warden Holds Three

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Hundreds of fish were killed in Big Run Creek in Shenango Township district Saturday and three young men were held by Frank Coen, fish and game protector for Lawrence County. The game protector said a substance poisonous to the fish was in the water.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

ONE CAN FIND HUMOR anywhere in the theatrical Broadway. The gin mills, the theaters, the speakeasies, the touts—all of these have stories to tell. Probably never before is one meeting place that offers more humorous material than all of the others put together. I refer to the office of the dramatic agent.

Due to the influence of the leading ladies I possess a hectic hunch that the popular conception of the dramatic agent has become slightly warped. One pictures a bald, overdressed individual who smokes a huge cigar, grimaces at the gentlemen and leers at the ladies. Nothing, of course, could be farther from the truth.

Your modern Broadway dramatic agent and there are very few of the old school left, has nothing in common with employment agents. He is known to all of the actors and actresses in town and is often consulted by producers in need of new faces. He is a necessary cog in the wheel of business.

All day long actors and actresses file into the dramatic agent's office. Some are good. Some are impossible. Some are already stars. Nothing ambitious is going. Coming and going.

I dropped in to see one after lunch last week. I was not new to me but for some reason or other the distinctive thing struck home for the first time. Sit with me and see why.

This specific office has actors' and photos about the walls. A fairly large office. Six chairs. Two girls both smoking. Some 12 or 15 chairs. Two desks. Three large windows that the sunshine just seems to pour.

Four o'clock. The office is crowded. To the left is a door. It leads to the boss and is always kept closed. One girl has a typewriter with one finger while the other greets each new entrant.

These people. Some are. Some small. Pretty girls. A Dutch comedian whose real name is Kelly. Talking. Talking. Buzz. Buzz. Buzz. That fellow over there—will he be a John Barrymore some day. And that girl—will she be a Marilyn Miller. Perhaps.

Buzz. Buzz. Hear them talk. One girl's tears are another's laughter. One man's success means the other man's failure.

"It's only fair I tell you. And she says to me she says. The rent's due and. So Lee Shubert gives me this interview. I hear that Woods. Why, of course I know her. So he took the ring and threw it on the floor."

Here comes a young fellow. Possibly 20 years of age. A head of straw while hair. Glasses. A hat. He walks in. He hesitates somewhat as he sees all the activity. But there is an element of hope in his eyes.

The girl says nothing. Just shakes her head. And the old, old look.

"I'll be in tomorrow," he says in a low tone. "Guess something will turn up soon."

On an average there are 250 plays produced in New York each season. This means that there is work for some 2,000 actors. But most of these recognized actors step from one play to another, thus cutting the list more than half.

And yet in the course of a season some 4,000 people who call themselves actors and actresses step into the dramatic agent's office. Where do they come from? Where do they go? How do they eat? How do they live?

Wall street lends no greater gamblers than these very souls. The clerk makes only a clerk's wages, but he is sure of them. The butcher, the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, the shoemaker, all of these know that their next meal will surely arrive.

But the actor gambles. He puts his life on the chance that he will be the one to acquire an hour of fleeting fame. And the odds are all against him.

There is drama aplenty in any dramatic agent's office. And each plot is unfolded on that shakiest of all platforms, the Stage of Life.

"Been seeing them come and go for five years," she chirps as she powders her nose. "They never seem to get tired. You see the same faces. And you hear the same stories. Gets boring after a while.

"Well, it's time to quit. I'm leaving as soon as that old bird comes in. He never fails. Always drops in at the same hour."

The elevator. A slow step. And an old man steps into the doorway. Possibly 70 years of age. A head of snow white hair. Glasses. A hat. He walks in. He hesitates somewhat as he sees all the activity. But there is an element of hope in his eyes.

The girl says nothing. Just shakes her head. And the old, old look.

"I'll be in tomorrow," he says in a low tone. "Guess something will turn up soon."

NAVY TO BUILD GIANT HANGAR

5 Men in Boat Kill Monster Shark

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Aug. 3 (INS)—While thousands of excursionists looked on from the decks of a steamer, lookout at the masthead, a small rowboat armed with axes and marlinspikes waged a terrific battle in the water near by with a huge man-eating shark, finally killing the monster.

It measured 18 feet and weighed in the vicinity of 6,000 pounds. The sharks, which had angled in a huge fish net and lashed madly about, attracting Capt. George Brier and his men to the scene.

Slovaks to Meet In Greene County

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Aug. 3—

DOPE SUSPECT SEIZED IN PARK

BALTIMORE, Aug. 3 (AP)—A former narcotics informer who federal agents claim openly peddled drugs in a Baltimore park thereafter, a hypodermic needle into the arms of his customers was to be arraigned today before a United States Commissioner.

The man, John Burkhardt, 40, was arrested at an entrance to the park. Agents making the arrest said they caught him in the act of selling drugs to two Negroes.

Agents of the government said the man had frequently brought his two small children, aged 3 and 5, to the park as a "blind" and declared that when asked if they knew what their father was doing the children said they did.

Of course they taste better they're FRESH!

There's a rare and abiding joy in the fragrance of perfectly conditioned tobaccos that is sadly missing in stale dried-out cigarettes packed the old-fashioned way.

You have only to switch to Camels in the Humidor Pack for one day to see how true this is.

As you savor the mild, cool, throat-friendly smoke of Camels—an incense of fine Turkish and mild Domestic tobaccos expertly blended—your every taste-nerve gets a happy thrill.

What a contrast to the unkindly hot smoke of dusty, fast-burning cigarettes, to the bite-and-sting of cheaper, parched-dry tobaccos!

Fine cigarettes—made fine and kept fine wherever you buy them—that is the pleasant and palatable Camel story.

The scientific germ-safe wrapping—not plain ordinary Cellophane, but moisture-proof Cellophane which costs nearly twice as much—seals in all the natural freshness, seals it so tightly that wet weather cannot make Camels damp, nor drought weather make them dry.

As a new experience in smoking pleasure, try Camels for just one day. Then leave them—if you can.

Tune in CAMEL QUARTER HOUR featuring Morton Downey and Tony Wons Columbia Broadcasting System—every night except Sunday

Don't remove the moisture-proof Cellophane from your package of Camels after you open it. The Humidor Pack is protection against sweat, dust and germs. It delivers fresh Camels and keeps them right until the last one has been smoked

Then Studebaker gave us Free Wheeling and put the thrill back into motoring (and a 15% to 20% saving in oil and gas). Now adults get the same joy out of driving a car that children get out of tobogganing, skating or chuting the chutes.

Motoring is again an OUTDOOR SPORT.

Now that you can buy a Free Wheeling Studebaker for $845, it's perfectly all to buy a car without it—aren't I right?

Policemen Don Plus-Fours to Nab Thieves

ST. DAVIDS, Pa., Aug. 3 (AP)—Police manuals don't give space to golf, but policemen here found a knowledge of the game helped.

Disguised in knickers, they captured three men who, they said, had been systematically stealing golf balls at the main line open links for months.

The men were nabbed as they ran from behind bushes and snatched balls driven by the policemen. The three had 38 golf balls when arrested, police said. The prisoners were sentenced to 30 days each.

WARD POLITICIAN ACCUSED IN SHAKEDOWN

TRIO ARRESTED IN SOUTH PARK ROBBERY

Suspects Acussed in Theft Of Slot Machine Money; Downtown Store Looted

Three young men who are alleged to have looted the barbecue stand of Carlo Lombardi in South Park early today, were arrested a short time later by Mt. Lebanon police who halted their machine to question them. According to the police, the trio stole two slot machines containing between $30 and $40 in nickels and dimes.

The prisoners said they were Robert Wagner, 26, of South Park; Michael Glassner, 20, of 312 Island avenue, McKees Rocks, and Joseph Poprlock, 19, of 313 Eighth avenue, Stowe Township.

They gained entrance to the barbecue, police say, by smashing a panel in a front door. The machines were taken to the highway and broken open.

A number of other robberies and holdups of less magnitude also marked the week-end.

Women's wearing apparel valued at $1,000 was stolen early yesterday from the store of Jacob Sperling at 814 Penn avenue, according to a report to police. A fire door and a window were forced open.

Jaywalker League Promotes Curb To Curb Flights

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

There is now a Pedestrian's League in New York for protection, advancement and conservation of jaywalking life.

Sorry to state that it has already lost a few members by flirting.

The Pedestrian's League will not advance you socially. But it gives credit for non-stop flights from curb to curb, telephones for ambulances at club rates and is the first on the spot with a book and an orange.

It is time that the jakewalker organized to compete with industrial conditions on two-way streets. He carries his life in his shoes at all times. He starts on a green light and ends his career on a red.

It's always the open season when he is in the middle of the street. His body washes ashore near a fire plug. Next day they find his hat floating in southbound traffic.

We are going to take out two memberships in the Pedestrain's League of Selfish Defense. One for walking east and the other for limping west.

And while it may not help it's always nice to read in the obits that you were a prominent club member.

Lipton Denies N. Y. Trip With Challenge

COWES, England, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Sir Thomas Lipton yesterday denied reports, published in New York, that he was leaving for the United States late this month with a challenge from the Royal Yacht Squadron for the America's Cup.

Two Bandits Holdup Store

Two robbers fled with $50, taken from the cash register, after threatening death to Samuel B. Manchester, 50, manager of a chain grocery at Lowell street and Shetland avenue, this morning.

One of the bandits, armed with a revolver, compelled Manchester to lie face downward on the floor. He snarled:

"Tell us where you have hidden the Saturday receipts or we'll kill you."

At that moment his pal noticed James Sabriza, of 539 Lowell street, who had witnessed the holdup from across the street, running from the scene. He called his accomplice and the two leaped into a large car and disappeared. Sabriza was running to a telephone to notify police.

THREE IN MINE PARADE BEATEN

Two men and a woman, marching on the Consumers mine at Harmarsville this morning, were beaten, witnesses say, when they attempted to flee from deputy sheriffs.

A parade of pickets from up-river towns was turned back by a force of deputies near Cheswick shortly after 6 o'clock this morning and one of the cars speeding away, it is said, was followed by the deputies. There was a crash of cars. Residents of Cheswick were aroused by screams of the occupants.

At the sheriff's office it was stated that Mike Slemko, 40, of Oakmont, was the driver of the car. It was said he attempted to run down deputies and then crashed into a county car. The deputies said they had to use force to take the man from the car.

Two other striking miners were under arrest today. At Coverdale, Joe Unlovich was accused of urging striking miners to attack miners going to work in a truck. J. F. Ogulnich, of Bridgeville, was accused of urging marchers to disregard the Sheriff's order in regard to a parade at Coverdale.

Ex-Dormont Man Takes Own Life

WHEELING, W. Va., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Thomas Shai, 63, millworker, shot himself to death in the municipal park here yesterday. Shai is survived by two sons, Fred, Wheeling policeman, and Thomas, Jr., and a sister, Mrs. Thomas Cronin, of Dormont. Shai formerly resided with his sister in Dormont.

August brings the approach of an important event for ex-service people, the annual Sun-Telegraph picnic, set for the twenty-ninth.

The annual fete is open to all former Army, Navy, Marine and auxiliary service members who served in American wars, as well as members of the Allied and Central power forces of the World War.

Many new features are planned for this year's festival. In addition to these new features, tickets will be given the visitors entitling them to trips on Kennywood's most popular rides.

Free coffee and doughnuts served by Salvation Army lassies are always foremost on the list of attractions.

Veterans of Northern and Southern forces in the Civil War have been invited, with disabled former service men of all other American wars, now in hospitals, to attend a special dinner as guests of the Sun-Telegraph in the latter hours of the picnic.

Further details of the festival will be announced in the Sun-Telegraph from time to time. Meanwhile, remember, the date is August 29, at Kennywood Park.

IGNORING RIOT THREAT

—Rival Unionists Failed to "Break Up Meeting"

PHILIP MURRAY — P. T. FAGAN

National Vice-President Murray, U. M. W., speaking at Canonsburg to 2,800, as Mr. Fagan, district president, received congratulations. Thirty state troopers were on hand, after threats by National Mine Workers, the new and rival union, to break up this meeting.

MINERS' CLASH AVERTED AT CANONSBURG

Fagan Cheered in Telling Of Fight for Life; State Troopers Patrol Roads.

While 2,800 members of the United Mine Workers cheered P. T. Fagan, president of the Pittsburgh district of the union, who addressed them in Canonsburg yesterday, a small group of National Mine Workers gathered at Meadow Lands, four miles away, and failed to make good their threat to meet simultaneously in Canonsburg, march upon the United Miners and break up their meeting.

ROAD PATROLLED

Thirty mounted state police and a throng of Fagan's followers patrolled the highway as a warning that the edict of Canonsburg police forbidding the march through the town from Beck's Park to the Fagan demonstration at Curry Field would be enforced. No gathering was held at Beck's Park.

Murray accused the Pittsburgh Coal Company and non-union coal operators with aiding and abetting the radicals who were fighting the United Mine Workers. He said:

"The assassin who attempted the life of Fagan had as his partners the radicals and the non-union coal operators who by their actions are encouraging such acts as these and fostering poverty and discontent among the miners.

COMPANY CRITICIZED

"The United Mine Workers are for President Hoover and the national conference on the coal mining situation, and who do we find opposing this great constructive endeavor conceived in a decent sense of humanity and feeling for the poverty-stricken workers? We find the Pittsburgh Coal Company and the radicals of the National Mine Workers doing all in their powers to prevent the conference.

"The Pittsburgh Coal Company in its domination of the coal industry is furthering the cause of Communism and anarchy and marching side by side with the Communists."

Bathers Save Man After Leap

Rescued by swimmers after police say he plunged from the West Braddock Bridge, Rankin, into the Monongahela River, George Formalas, 40, of 707 Jones avenue, Braddock, was recovering today in Braddock Hospital.

Jumping from the bridge, Formalas landed near Jake Ban, 17, and George Rabbi, 17, both of Third avenue, Rankin, swimming beneath the bridge, who carried him to shore, where he was removed to the hospital, according to police.

SUMMER COURT HEARS 15

Fifteen of the persons indicated in the special hearing of the grand jury Thursday, pleaded guilty at today's session of summer Criminal Court and 10 of them were placed on probation.

Two others were freed when charges against them were dropped and three were sentenced to the workhouse for six months. All of the cases were of a trivial nature.

Because of the agreement entered into by the judges when the courts were closed for the summer, the prisoners were enabled to present their cases before Judge James H. Gray rather than wait until the resumption of the regular term in September.

ADMITS HE RAN RAIDED BAR

Thomas Seeley, 29, of 125 Electric avenue, East Pittsburgh, gave himself up to federal authorities today, saying he was the proprietor of a second-floor barroom in the rear of a chain store in the 800 block Linden avenue, East Pittsburgh, raided by dry agents Saturday. He escaped as the agents entered.

He was held for Federal Court in $2,000 bail.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Aug. 3.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Somebody said we had a chance to sell Germany some wheat and cotton on time. Sure, let 'em have all they want, and take the pay out in good German beer. Then pass a law that if you found a man drinking whisky he gets 10 years. If everybody had all the beer they wanted, they would naturally be against the whisky drinker and would help enforce the law against him. Then you would have a popular law.

Will Rogers

Put a good tax on the beer and that would take care of the unemployment fund. A bushel of wheat for a big "growler of Wueberger" wouldn't be a bad trade. That's about all the ideas I got today. Yours, WILL.

The arrest of Samuel Gettleman, 605 N. St. Clair street, a ward politician, was ordered by Magistrate T. D. Jones in Morals Court today, after hearing testimony of an alleged shakedown of a woman rooming house proprietor.

Constable J. J. Stoneward, of Reserve Township, was ordered brought in for questioning.

Frank Treesa, of the Kirkwood Hotel; Pearl Miller, of 5804 Center avenue, and John Snyder, of 129 Latham street, all arrested on complaint of Mrs. Lillian Appleby, 5910 Center avenue, proprietor of the rooming house, were held over.

Mrs. Appleby testified she had given Gettleman $300 to "fix" a charge of keeping a disorderly house preferred against her by Snyder before a justice of the peace. Treesa later got $275 back, she said. He threatened to blow up her home, she said, when she refused to pay for a case of whisky which Treesa had given to Constable Stoneward for helping settle the charge against her.

Pearl Miller, according to testimony, was substituted for Mrs. Appleby at the squire's hearing. She was discharged.

Snyder agreed to make the charge against Mrs. Appleby in return for a promise by Gettleman to help him obtain appointment as constable in the Eighth Ward, according to the testimony.

THUNDERCLOUD TRAPS PILOT

CLEVELAND, Aug. 3.—(AP).—Pilot Ralph C. Wensmser recounted today one of the most nerve-chilling freakish airplane flights ever experienced and survived. He got above the Cleveland airport yesterday while making his daily ascension to 18,000 feet to make weather tests for the Weather Bureau.

Wensmser said he drove his plane purposely into a cloud formation known as a "thunderhead." Once inside it, he said, tremendous air forces gripped his plane, took it out of his control, shot it upward at 1,400 feet a minute, pushed it sideways nearly 70 miles an hour and then finally released the grasp to let the plane and occupant escape undamaged.

A thunderhead, Wensmser said, is a towering mass of cotton-like clouds which rise sometimes to a height of several miles.

We Now Present

By Howard L. Browning, Jr.

Bill Everett, banjo guitarist of Fred Schmadel's orchestra leaves soon to join Guy Lombardo's band. Schmadel's on tonight.

Guy Lombardo will direct his Royal Canadians in song hits of today and yesterday over WJAS at 10 p. m.

Best bet of all tonight should be Roy Bargy's Orchestra over KDKA at 8 p. m., ending in that song you'll wait for. "Waiting for the Robert E. Lee."

Mary and Bob will go to air with "Strange Road to Happiness" over WCAE and the Red NBC network at 9 p. m. tonight. The story, said to be true, takes the pair into the Orchestra Pottsville. Ore. They'll probably describe the cases of the geography instead of the far more romantic cities of great lighthouses along the banks of the Columbia which the sailors see and thrills to.

DIAMOND AIDE FACES TRIAL

CATSKILL, N. Y., Aug. 3.—(AP)—With John "Gary" Scacchio awaiting sentence on an assault charge, the state is expected to move for trial today of the case of another member of Jack "Legs" Diamond gang, Harry "Skunky" Klein, charged with first degree grand larceny.

Klein will be brought today from the Greene County jail where he has passed the time for more than a year to hear the deputies of Attorney General John J. Jarrett, Jr., begin their accusation that he had stolen the automobile of Harry Western, missing Kingston roadhouse proprietor. The automobile, blood-stained and mud-spattered, was found in Klein's possession in Brooklyn last summer.

Man, Daughter Injured in Crash

BUTLER, Pa., Aug. 3.—(AP)—Alfred Sully, 40, and his daughter, Edna, 8, of Cleveland, were taken to Butler County Memorial Hospital suffering from cuts received in an automobile accident.

Witnesses said Fred Sully, of Astoria, Long Island, driving their car, failed to see a traffic signal and drove into the machine of Roland Thompson, of Butler. Thompson also was cut and bruised.

Heat Slows Work On Boulder Dam

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—(AP)—The building of the Boulder Canyon Dam is being slowed by terrific desert heat, Government engineers supervising the construction reported to the Bureau of Reclamation Saturday that the recent deaths and numerous prostrations have demoralized the workers to a noticeable degree and that this has been reflected in reduced progress.

Ice Crushes Ship, Steamer Saves Crew

NOME, Alaska, Aug. 3.—(AP)—The United States Signal Corps has received word that the Russian steamer Kolymas, although slightly damaged by ice, rescued the crew of the Russian steamer Tchernenka, crushed by ice along the Siberian coast across from Point Hope, Alaska. One member of the Tchernenka's crew died of heart failure.

Three Die as Car Plunges Into River

PEARL'S, Tenn., Aug. 3.—(AP)—Three persons drowned near here Saturday as their car rolled backward down a 50-foot embankment into the Caney Fork River. Another occupant of the car escaped by jumping out of a rear window before it plunged. The dead are: Miss Lorene Medley, 17, the driver; Miss Hattie Paris, 21, both of Sparta, and Doc Judd, 32, Cassville.

Ex-Senator Jailed For Alimony Freed

LEXINGTON, Ky., Aug. 3.—(AP)—Former State Senator A. H. Hargis, Jackson, Ky., was released from jail Saturday after arranging to resume alimony payments to his divorced wife. He also withdrew a $50,000 damage suit he had filed against Circuit Judge King Swope, who committed him to jail last week.

The Loud Speaker By Louis Reid

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—An organization of candy makers recently conducted a radio survey to find the best means of inducing 50,000,000 listeners to reach for a sweet. The results were not unlike those of previous researches of microphone sponsors.

For example it was discovered that women dislike women as announcers or speakers. (Do women like women in any walk of life? Ask Einstein, he may know.) The one entertainment feature most often mentioned was orchestra music. Not blatant, not highbrow music, but music with plenty of what the boss at the keyboard call "heart appeal." Men singers are preferred.

There's really nothing new in any of this save the finding that women announcers or speakers bring sniffs and possibly sneers to feminine listeners. It has long been known that good old heart appeal has always had first call in the parlors. Equally has it long been known that men singers are preferred to their warbling sisters.

* * *

The microphone has been a big obstacle for feminine vocalists to overcome, particularly those vocalists who carve a coloratura path upon the air. The contraltos have not had such a difficult time of it, and the lower voice of the contraltos are pretty much in demand in the salons of the broadcasters. But sopranos—Theirs is to do or die upon the radio. And most of them die. Most of them, unless they have unusual prestige back of them, find only silence in the home.

* * *

It seems to us that women will come in for conspicuous notice on the air when they are able to bring something of their theatrical or moving picture fame with them. Today as yesterday and the day before, the choice places in the radio parade are reserved for their brothers under the skin. It would seem that if women were to scan closely this procession they would discern a large banner upon which was inscribed "Abandon hope all ye women who enter here."

* * *

Of course, there are conditions. Some women have by sheer merit earned high rank for themselves in the broadcasting army—Dagmar Perkins, the Boswell Sisters, Vaughn de Leath, Florence Richardson, Welcome Lewis, Mildred Hunt, Gertrude Berg, Julia Sanderson, Mathilde Harding, Olive Palmer, Jessica Dragonette, Frances Alda, to name a few. And others seem to be on the way—the Brox Sisters, Ruth Etting.

BEST SHUT-OUT RECORD IN 28 YEARS

IT'S A SHUTOUT or nothing with the Pirates these days. In almost two thirds of the season, or up to last Thursday, Heinie Meine was the only Pittsburgh pitcher to face his opponent. Now everybody's doing it. Four consecutive days have seen the enemy held runless by four different Buccaneer hurlers. First it was Larry French, next it was Remy Kremer, then it was Glenn Spencer and yesterday Ervin Brame swung into line in the sensational whitewash parade, making it 40 straight innings in which Corsairs failed to score a run.

That's the greatest shutout record made by any major league club in a stretch of 28 years. The Bucs still are two games below the all time major mark of six straight shutouts, set by themselves in 1903, but they have equaled the closest approach to it, which was four in a row, won by the Cleveland Americans later in the same year. The Indians ran up 41 straight scoreless innings. The Bucs today needed only two more to tie both records and to beat that and become holders of the best two shutout records.

Ervin Brame

THE FOUR GAMES were the latest record of 1903 Countless times in the years following it they played seven straight games without being scored on. Here's how they won the record shutouts, all the games being played at old Exposition Park, Cincinnati, Reds' grounds in red.

A MINOR LEAGUE Evan Lincoln, in the Western League duplicated Pittsburgh's record of six straight blanks in the same year, but the high mark in the minor loops was boosted to nine straight in 1913 by Portland of the Pacific Coast League.

The greatest number of shutout games ever lost consecutively by a major league team was four. The Boston Nationals dropped four in succession in 1906 and Cincinnati met a similar fate in 1908. The Reds now are within one game of that mark.

THE DASH OF the Buccaneers, in which they have won 18 of their last 20 games, has put them right at the heels of the Boston Braves and today they were only half a game from fifth place, having played one game less than the Braves. The series starting today with the Cardinals threatens to be the hardest the locals have yet experienced since they began their climb. At any rate the Bucs have found the Cards harder to beat than any other visitor here this year. Though the Pirates won four out of seven games in St. Louis, they lost all but one of their five tilts with the Red birds at Forbes Field.

Alva Bradley

ONE OF THE landmarks of the American League will pass when President Alva Bradley moves the Cleveland Indians from their present park to the new stadium in that city. League Park, which the Cleveland club has been using since Charles Somers put the city in the major league in 1901, has an interesting history.

All the stars of the American League played there at one time or another either as home or visiting athletes, including such famous figures as Cy Young, Addie Joss, Nap Lajoie, Rube Waddell, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Ed Walsh, Jimmy Collins, Bill Dineen, Jack Chesbro, Bill Bradley, Terry Turner, Ray Chapman, Stanley Coveleskie, Sam Crawford, Donie Bush, Germany Schaefer, Bills Sullivan and many others.

TWO WORLD SERIES teams that have never been repeated in the annual classic were performed their stuff in the Indians' old Robins were defeated in the big title in 1920. Bill Wambsganss pulled a triple play in the series and Elmer Smith made a home run with the bases full.

It was in the same year with the Indians on their way to victory, Ray Caldwell pitched a no-hit game for the Yankees, a feat that has since been equaled by Carl Hubbell of the Giants.

SAM GIBSON, the pitcher whom the Giants are said to have purchased from San Francisco, has surprised major league men by his showing this year. He displayed only fair ability while with the Tigers, with the result that they shipped him to Toronto. The Yankees bought him from Toronto, but could see little good in him, and passed him along to San Francisco in part payment for Shortstop Frank Crosetti. Sam crossed up everybody this year by developing into one of the most successful pitchers in the minor leagues.

GIBSON is said to be ready to become a major leaguer after being schooled long enough for the big show. Dazzy Vance and others developed into stars when sent back to the sticks. A chance of style sometimes does the work, and something of that sort applies to Gibson, according to Pacific Coast fans who have watched him on the coast.

Cobb says that the secret of Faber's improvement is the perfecting of a side arm delivery. Sam can get the ball over that way with a sharp curve breaking away from right-handed hitters. The percentage is 75 with Faber, Cobb says. In a recent game right-handed batters made only three hits off Faber. They were all hitting at bad balls.

A BOY MAY play any position in high school football and do the job in a creditable manner, but that does not necessarily mean he will continue along the post when he enters the college ranks. He may find himself assigned to duty at an entirely different position.

There are many good examples of this on the current Pitt squad, which at present is undergoing preliminary practice, putting in the last weeks of vacation before the training season begins about the middle of September.

Ralph Daugherty

WHEN HE PLAYED at McKeesport High, Eddie Hirshberg, this year's Panther captain, was a fullback, but since entering Pitt he has been an end. Mike Milligan, probable varsity guard, was a center while at Kiski, started at that position in his first year here and then moved over to guard. Jim MacMurdo and Joe Tormey, tackle and center, respectively, had reverse experiences [illegible] was a center in his high school days at Elwood City, while Tormey was a tackle at Erie Academy High. And then there is the case of Ralph Daugherty, at present busy on an unusually hard academic schedule, who, after he has been permitted by the faculty to register this fall and return to the team, will be playing center, a vastly different position from the halfback berth he occupied while at Kiski.

CRACK ARRAY TO DUEL FOR CROWNS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Sizzling successful was the pre-liminary round contesting leading to individual parks men's and women's singles crowns of the second annual Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Pittsburgh public parks tennis championships. Favored by perfect tennis weather, the tourney got into a tangle because of rain, the opening carding through all of last week on the courts of Schenley, Highland, Riverview, West, Olympia and Frick parks here and when last volley had been stowed away in the Karl Beilstein-Art Graham tussle on the shore of Lake Elizabeth Saturday evening an original field of 180 aspirants had been reduced by process of elimination combat to an even dozen luminaries each of whom boasts either a masculine or a feminine park center crown.

There now remains the finals in addition of the proceedings, the city park series on the carefully groomed Frick hot this week. Early plans called for the staging of these colorful tussles on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, but last-minute decision has altered this program slightly, so that hostilities will be started on Wednesday instead of on Thursday, while Friday will be an afternoon of rest.

MAY AVOID JAM

The purpose of the switch in the inter-park affair were twofold, to provide for the week-end rain or sun one of three days would fall things badly probably and force holdover of inquisitive until Monday. Under the revised schedule Saturday will constitute the only serious gamble with old Pluvius.

The group of 12 that will battle for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph men's and women's parks challenge cups and trips to the national public parks championships at Detroit looms as an array even stronger than the formidable host that fought for honors a year ago. Frank Brouda, Harvard southpaw star, and Mrs. Jean Artzberger, South Hills satellite, breezed through handsomely again at Frick and Olympia respectively and will thus be in position to defend their 1930 laurels against the assaults of the powerful coterie seeking to ascend the throne.

Brouda may not retain his title but the chap who beats him will flash tennis good enough to warrant rating no worse than sixteenth on the national public parks list. Jack Redmond, repeat victor at Highland and Karl Beilstein, retainer of the West Park gondalon, are veterans of inter-park mixing who may give Brouda trouble. Redmond, another portsider, boasts vicious service and blistering overhead. He volleys well and, though not especially severe off the ground, is steady enough to bother the best of 'em.

NEWCOMERS STRONG

The newcomers in the men's event at Park air Harry Wald, Schenley stylist; Bill Creighton, accomplished Olympia and Al Corkle, slashing Riverview sure-thing in Jack Herrmann. Wald, a Schenley High School product of a year's seniority. Though not a terrific walloper, he executes forehand and backhand drives fluently and with sufficient pace to render them dangerous when combined with the Wald accuracy and craftiness.

Creighton offers style developed much along the line of that of Wald. The Olympia youth is exceptionally steady and exceptionally courageous. McCorkle slaps a vicious top-spin drive. His backhand is spiced his service strokes

MRS. VAN RYN ADVANCES

EAST HAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 3 (AP).—Mrs. Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, the only remaining seeded player, advanced to the semi-final round of the sixth annual Maidstone Club invitation tennis tournament today by vanquishing Mrs. J. Dallas Corbett, Boston, 7-5, 6-2, 6-1. The summary:

Twomey to Aid At U. of Georgia

ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 3 (AP).—Official announcement by H. J. Stegeman, athletic director, that Ted Twomey, former Notre Dame tackle, has been added to the coaching staff of the University of Georgia, brings to three the number of former Rockne pupils on the list of Georgia's gridiron mentors.

Twomey will serve as line coach, Stegeman said. The two other Notre Dame men are Harry Mehre, head football coach and Rex Enright, backfield coach.

Kozeluh Wins Over Bill Tilden

LAKE FOREST, Ill., Aug. 3 (AP).—William T. Tilden II, world professional tennis champion, was unable to cope with the consistency of Karel Kozeluh, fellow member of the troop of barnstorming professionals, who battled his way to a gruelling five-set victory, 3-6, 9-7, 6-1, 4-6, 6-3, yesterday at the Onwentsia Country Club.

Heavy winds and an intermittent sprinkle bothered both players considerably. Tilden erred repeatedly in the final set.

SPORT VIGNETTES

An exiled king seeks to return to his throne this week. He is Carl Kauffmann, of Homestead, three times national public links golf champion. He makes his fight over the Keller course at St. Paul beginning tomorrow. For several days he has been on the scene brushing up his game and familiarizing himself with the layout.

Golfers throughout the Pittsburgh district will be pulling for him to come through and regain the brights. Because there's a story behind his dethronement.

Carl Kauffmann

It happened at Jacksonville, Fla., last year, when he was disqualified on a technicality while trying to win his fourth straight national crown. It was a shabby bit of treatment on the part of the tournament officials. Proof that they didn't give Kauffmann a fair shake was to be found in their decision that he did not have to qualify this year unless he wanted to. Bitter over the action that eliminated him last year, Kauffmann at the time announced he was through with public links tournament golf. But time heals all wounds and mellows all grievances, and we find the Homesteader back in the running again, spurning the olive branch of the officials and doggedly entering the local qualifying round to win his spurs from the ground up. If he wins at St. Paul he may have a story to tell that will make interesting reading.

John Jay Burke, father of local public links golf, will tell you that but for bungled handling of the national tournaments Kauffmann now might be bidding for his sixth successive national title. In 1926 at Buffalo, he was the victim of lowe officiating which enabled Lester Bolstad to beat him out. In 1927 at Cleveland, in 1928, at Philadelphia, and again in 1929 at St. Louis, Kauffmann came through to win the championship and then last year, followed the unfortunate episode at Jacksonville, which wound up with Robert Wingate the winner.

Kauffmann is a young man of the quiet type. He doesn't say much. Concentration on his game is his outstanding competitive characteristic. He has been nursing a hatred over the bad break that befell him at Jacksonville. He lays the blame for his technical elimination at the door of a small group of men. The incident will serve as a spur to him at St. Paul. All he seeks is vindication. Win or lose, this may be his last national public links championship try. Shortly before he left to make his bid to regain what was taken from him, he told this writer he wasn't playing his best game. His putting touch has been eluding him all season. "But it may come to me just when I need it most," he said. "I hope so." And, as he spoke, there was earnestness in his voice. He wants to win this year's tourney as he never did another.

This will be the tenth national tourney of the free linkers, and if he had his just deserts, Kauffmann might now have to his credit half of them and be making a try for his sixth title. Somehow as you consider his case you feel keenly for the man and want to see him realize his ambition for revenge.

The mother of the player, remaining behind in her home in Homestead, will be the strongest rooter for Carl to come through. Naturally, she wants him to win. But there is a deeper and finer affection between the pair than ordinarily between a

SUN BEAU TOPS ALL WINNERS

CHICAGO, Aug. 3 (AP).—Old Sun Beau, which came pounding down the stretch victorious in the Arlington handicap Saturday to increase his earnings to $330,044, is the world's greatest money-winning thoroughbred, notwithstanding the claims set up for the French horse Ksar credited with having won $335,240.

Search of musty racing records revealed that Ksar's winnings included all the pieces of plate and cups he won instead of restricting his earnings to dollars and cents.

Disregarding the freak record set up by Ksar, the list of high money winners of the world follows:

America, Sun Beau, $330,044.
England, Isinglass, $291,275.
Australia, Amaounis, $241,488.
France, Satrantal, $211,405.

Racing authorities said that Ksar actually won in dollars and cents about $200,000, but the value of the cups and plate awarded to the French horse brought his total earnings up to the amount claimed for him. They pointed out that if Willis Sharpe Kilmer, of Binghampton, N. Y., owner of gallant Old Sun Beau, desires to include the value of the cups and trophies the famous son of Sun Briar, Beautiful Lady had won his earnings might be stretched to $375,000.

Bob Bryan Wins Kentucky Net Title

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 3 (AP).—Bob Bryan, Chattanooga, runner-up last year to Wilmer Hines, Columbia, S. C., succeeded to Hines' Kentucky tennis championship yesterday by defeating Ben (Doc) Barr, Dallas, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3, in the final match.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The talk of the baseball world as a result of four consecutive runless performances on the part of their pitchers, the Buccos today were back home from Cincinnati where yesterday they added their fourth shutout success. The score was 3 to 0. Moreover, the Enquirer, looking at the standing of the clubs after yesterday's festivities, realized they were but half a game behind the fifth-place Braves.

It isn't so much of a trick to win four games in succession nor to score four shutout triumphs without a break as an achievement which will set the oldtimers agog.

Twenty-eight years ago, Fred Clarke's championship Pirate sharpshooters worked six successive shutout games for a record. These sterling pitchers reeled off 56 rounds of runless stuff, so that Jewel Ens' hurlers are getting quite close to that margin.

40 SCORELESS INNINGS

The Buccaneers hurlers reached the 40-inning mark yesterday when Ervy Brame, from down Kentucky way, pitched a goose-egg party against the Reds. It was Ervy's best effort of the season and it surely came at a time to tickle the cockles of Jewel Ens' heart.

But the Pirates face quite an ordeal if they are to reach the heights attained by Clarke's stars. The league-leading Cardinals also come into our city today, they being scheduled to open a three-game series with the Pirates this afternoon.

Quite naturally the Redbirds will be tough, for they are anxious to repeat their flag honors in the National League and while they have a commanding lead they have a long journey to travel before they clinch the decision. This condition will spur them on to bigger things.

Skipper Ens has an ace in the pole in Heinie Meine. The Prince of Luxemburg has blanked his neighbors twice this year and that, dear reader, is an unmatched accomplishment in the league. So if Heinie is right today there is no telling what will happen in line connection, the whitewash act. Jess Haines is due to pitch for the Redbirds, but there is no assurance he will last, as Manager Street has been giving the veteran plenty of rest this summer.

SEEK FIFTH IN ROW

A fifth straight victory today would give the Pirates an even rating with the Braves.

Brame followed in the wake of Glenn Spencer, Remy Kremer and Larry French as he shut the door in the faces of the Reds. The four pitchers have worked 36 runless rounds, beginning with Thursday's wrap with the Giants and

WOMEN BREAK SWIM MARKS

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 3 (AP).—Two world swimming records for women were broken yesterday when Miss Joan McSheehy, of Whitinsville, Mass., bettered the 220-meter backstroke record and Miss Eva Bein, of the Women's Swimming Association of New York, shortened the time for the 700-yard free style event.

The records were made at an exhibition meet held at Newport Beach with representatives of the A. A. U. officialling.

Miss McSheehy clipped three-fifths of a second from the former record for the back stroke event which was held by Eleanor Holm, by splashing over the distance in 3 minutes 2 4-5 seconds.

Miss Bein traversed the 700 yards in the free style swim in 10 minutes 12 3-5 seconds as Miss Lisa Lindstrom, also a member of the New York Association and former holder of the record, looked on. The former record was 10 minutes 27 2-5 seconds made here in 1930, by Miss Lindstrom.

After going enough bad hurling during the early part of the season to get virtually all of it out of their systems, Pittsburgh's pitchers apparently have set out in pursuit of the major league shutout records that a group of Pirate hurlers set 28 years ago.

Ervin Brame blanked the Cincinnati Reds with five hits yesterday, giving the Pirates a 3-to-0 victory and their fourth straight shutout triumph. Before Larry French started the shutout streak against the New York Giants four days ago the Pirates had finished a game by blanking the New Yorkers in the last four innings and now have recorded 40 successive scoreless frames.

BRAVES LOSE TWO

Pittsburgh's latest triumph, the fifteenth in 20 games, placed the Pirates only half a game behind the fifth-place Boston Braves, who lost both games of a doubleheader to the New York Giants. Old Clarence Mitchell held the Braves to six hits to win the first game, 4 to 2, while three New York hurlers gave up only five blows to complete the job of shifting the Giants back into second place with a 6-to-2 triumph.

The league leading St. Louis Cardinals shoved Chicago back to third place by pounding Charley Root for five runs in two innings and a 6-to-2 victory. Paul Derringer recorded his thirteenth victory of the season. The Phillies and Brooklyn rearned no decision in their twin bill, the Phils taking the first game, 5-2, and Brooklyn rallying for four runs in the seventh to win the second, 7 to 5.

NATS BEAT A'S

Saving it with bats, the Washington Senators served notice that they are not yet to be counted out of the American League race with their second straight victory over the Philadelphia Athletics. Washington pounded McDonald and Hoyt for eight runs in the first two innings and won, 10 to 6.

Cleveland's Indians registered the big gain for the American League day by winning two games from the St. Louis Browns. A five-run rally behind Wes Ferrell in the sixth inning brought them a 9 to 4 victory in the first and they broke a 9-9 tie in the ninth inning of the second clash to win, 11 to 9.

Expert pitching enabled the New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox to divide their doubleheader. Charley Ruffing pitched the Yanks to a 4 to 1 victory in the first game, striking out 10 while an error by Jorgens in the eighth inning gave Boston the only run of the second game as Wiley Moore and George Pipgras allowed only three hits each.

Detroit evened the cellar championship series with Chicago by taking the second game, 8 to 4, with a heavy hitting attack on Thomas and Caraway.

Mrs. Attlberger's sturdy driving and net work slip her an advantage which most of her rivals will be compelled to make up—if make up they can—through superior steadiness. Dorothy Miller Highland lass smacks a prettier forehand than does the premiere but Letitia Schmidt, Schenley contender, Mildred Klages, West ca'vorter, Ruth Staiger, Riverview entrant, and Jeannette Miller Prick debater, incline more to the chop and steadiness than does Miss Miller.

But it can't be settled here in print—and Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday will relate the story.

WOMAN SETS MARK

MARIENBAD (Germany), Aug. 3. (AP.)—Frauleine Fides Baumgartner, Austrian ace, won women's world tennis championship in a tiebreaker, 7-6, 6-4, 6-4, match here yesterday. Winning the championship with the German record breaker, she defeated Frauleine Braumuller, Austrian champion, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4. Miss Baumgartner's time for the match was 1 hour 45 minutes.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3. — Among the novel sights of the midsummer season is the team standing in both leagues without a Boston club occupying the bottom. Of course the Red Sox aren't up high enough to get dizzy, but they are out of the cyclone cellar at least. And if Boston erected Bunker Hill monument to honor a British victory, they ought to hoist equestrian statues of the Red Sox all over town. And the Braves, that formerly were mistaken for chiropodists because they were at the foot of the league so often are leading the second division now. That's why Boston fans are so crazy this season they are splitting infinitives like the rest of us folks.

AMATEUR PAIR TO PLAY PROS

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Aug. 3.—T. C. McClain, of the Sunnehanna Country Club, Johnstown, and I. B. Peterson, Jr., of Steubenville, will play against Johnny Farrell and Gene Sarazen in an exhibition match at the Summit Golf Club links here.

McClain and Peterson won the right to match strokes with the former open champions by showing the way to a field of 50 amateurs here Saturday and yesterday. McClain turned in a fine 72, one under par, and Peterson, who is a member of Ohio State University's varsity golf team, and had a 75, equaling par.

French Proud Dad Of Seven Pound Baby Boy

Not all of the celebration in the Pirate clubhouse today was caused by the four consecutive shutout victories which the Buccos have gained. Larry is a proud father of a baby who is eligible to become a major league pitcher or champion fungo-hitter some day. The young man weighed seven pounds when he arrived about midnight Saturday. He is the first born for the Frenches, and the mother and child were reported in good condition.

The lad's name will be Lawrence, Jr.

68. Dave Clarke, of Castle Shannon, and Don Watkins, of Corry, West Penn open champion, and Wilson F. Marks, of Oakmont, Walter Johnstone, Butler pro, and P. J. Grogan and I. W. Bernheim and Ralph Beach were tied for next place at 69.

mother and a grown son. If you don't think so, there's the story of the man who couldn't quite understand Carl. He thought the player too aloof, too self-contained, too "cold" to contact. Then one day he heard of a checkup at the office where Carl is employed. An efficiency system kept tab of all of the telephone calls made by employes. It revealed that this man Kauffmann made only one call each day, at exactly the same time, five minutes before noon, just before he went to lunch. And it was to his mother, inquiring about her welfare. Now that man is one of Carl's strongest boosters.—HARRY KECK.

Crop Prospects in Russia Reduced

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Russian grain crop prospects are being reduced by hot, dry weather, according to a cabled report from agricultural attachesteers to the United States Department of Agriculture. Yields per acre decidedly below last year are indicated, especially for the late-sown spring crops. So far as wheat is concerned, the prospective lower yields will be somewhat offset by the increase of about 7 per cent in acreage this year over last.

STOCK MARKET UNDERTONE IS CHEERFUL

Shares Maintain Upward Though Slow Tendency; Utilities, Steels Lead

NEW YORK, Aug. 3 (AP).—With a mildly cheerful, undertone, financial markets lazed through another session of mid-summer quiet today.

Stocks maintained a slow upward tendency, and bonds pushed forward at the start although some irregularity cropped out later. In commodities cotton was conspicuously firm.

In stocks utility, steel and merchandising issues led the advance with rails eventually following.

In the absence of impelling news developments traders appeared to be guided primarily by the thoroughly sold out appearance of the market late last week. Last week the price average of 90 representative issues showed net advances for four out of six sessions, and the only important selling experienced in response to United States Steel's dividend and earnings announcements was quickly absorbed.

While hopes of trade revival in the autumn are modest the earnings statements for the second quarter of the year now making their appearance are interpreted in speculative quarters as evidence of how substantial improvement can be accomplished with very moderate improvement in the volume of business. This of course reflects drastic operating economies. Quarter earnings statements by the National City Bank shows an increase of 31 per cent over the first quarter. Last year the second quarter was only about 4 per cent above the first.

The $250,000,000 credit to the Bank of England was reflected in some further firmness of sterling exchange. The Reichsbank weekly statement showed improvement in holdings of both foreign exchange and gold but this was largely offset by an increase in currency in circulation.

JULY BUSINESS SHOWS LOSS IN MORALE

Buying Power Rather Than Wage Reduction Seen as Urgent Need of Commerce

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.

July was characterized by some further recession in the total volume of business, and by a let-down in business morale.

The change in sentiment was marked by a series of efforts to correct the lack of economic equilibrium [illegible] than with [illegible] of ups.

President [illegible] to his [illegible] manu[illegible]

Rukeyser

According[illegible] stabilizing [illegible] rather than [illegible] should be apparent.

NEED BUYING POWER

The great need is to reverse and push buying power rather than to curtail it further. Any sustainable purchasing power is now a factor to all cannot rest on firmer foundation of price stability. To be secure it must stand on the granite base of a reliable program of production which will recommend to wealth-creating activities the vast hordes of unemployed whose unproductive idleness constitutes an immense waste of social cost.

Until recently President Hoover took great pride in the lack of social disturbances at home in connection with the severe economic depression. But of late there have been increasing evidences of breaches of the truce between capital and labor.

Strikes in the textile, clothing and coal trades are the outward indications of the passing of social tranquility. In the circumstances, it behooves management which is charged with leadership, to test out every promising means of restoring economic balance.

WORST IS OVER

With the domestic business situation thoroughly deflated, there are indications that the worst of the depression is over, especially if management is wise enough to resist impulses to make destructive moves which will narrow markets. The opportunities for improvement at home will be heightened if efforts to tide over the European crises are successful.

In coming to final grips with the domestic wage problem, it would seem the part of wisdom to use every sound means to bring about an economic situation which would support high wages. It has been urged by numerous scientific economists that the stimulus of a huge program of federal spending for public works could contribute to turning the tide toward prosperity.

Spectator

Steel Trade Watched.
Outlook Unsatisfactory.
Other Industries Rally.

By Wall Street Spectator

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.

THE PROMINENCE which has been given [illegible] of the steel [illegible] corporation statements [illegible] U. S. Steel and Bethlehem Steel Corporations has served to emphasize the [illegible] steel industry. [illegible] of the leading [illegible] indicators which have appeared [illegible] first half of [illegible] were able to [illegible] ... [illegible] ... [illegible] were about as expected. The average yields predicted being 2,850,000,000 bushels against the July 1 government forecast of 2,968,000,000, a reduction of 88,000,000 bushels in the last month.

THE OUTLOOK [illegible] the trade is [illegible] unsatisfactory. Similar [illegible] statements [illegible] taking [illegible] for the [illegible] year 1931 [illegible] the close [illegible] 50 per cent [illegible] those of 1930, while [illegible] profits will probably represent [illegible] the smallest total since 1921.

However, statistics [illegible] point [illegible] that in the sequence [illegible] which depression spreads [illegible] industry, [illegible] usually among the last [illegible] to participate. At the same time [illegible] is now [illegible] picking up.

In the ordinary course of events by the time the steel industry is [illegible] depressed, other industries are already on the mend. Therefore the present condition of the steel industry is susceptible of bullish interpretation, for the longer term.

As regards the position of [illegible] in this group, the outlook, over the near term, is not particularly bright.

Standard Statistics is of the opinion that despite the comparatively severe decline in steel stocks, it is unlikely that even current quotations fully discount the depressed profits outlook for the trade.

Furthermore, since the initial stages of improvement in general business will be reflected largely in direct consumer lines, it is not logical to expect that steel shares will participate as actively in near-term market rallies as issues in the more favorably situated groups.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—(AP)—Grain prices averaged higher early today helped by optimism in September corn quotations that welcomed fresh difficulties for bull traders. JUNE BUSINESS CHANGE SLIGHT

CLEVELAND, Aug. 3.—Slight change in general business conditions in the Fourth Federal Reserve District during June was noted today by the Cleveland Federal Reserve Bank in its monthly review. Operations in June and early July, said the report, were at a lower level than was current a month ago, but part of the decline was seasonal.

A few industries according to the summary reported that current operations compare rather favorably with last year, and June sales in some lines particularly wearing apparel, exceeded the same month of 1930. Following the moratorium announcement in late June a decided improvement in sentiment developed locally.

Conditions as shown by retail sales comparisons and unemployment figures are less favorable in centers of the district greatly dependent on the iron and steel or the automobile industries—Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Wheeling and Youngstown—than in other cities.

The iron and steel industry receded so slightly above 30 per cent of capacity in July, but operations in the fourth district steel centers were above the average for the entire country. Automobile production in June dropped much more than seasonally and parts concerns reduced operations accordingly.

Receiver Named for Large Coal Firm

WHITESBURG, Ky., Aug. 3.—(AP)—The Elkhorn Coal Corporation, with properties in Eastern Kentucky, valued at $20,000,000, went into receivership. C. W. Watson, appointed receiver, said operations would continue at the company's mines, which employ 1,200 men. Home offices of the corporation are in New York.

GERMANY'S GOLD HOLDINGS UP

BERLIN, Aug. 3.—A Reichsbank statement issued today under date of August 1 gives gold and bullion at 1,363,298,000 ($340,824,500) and foreign exchange 246,352,000 ($61,580,000), which represents increases of 10,495,000 marks ($2,623,750) and 86,789,000 marks ($21,697,000) respectively since the previous week.

Foreign short-term credits in Germany cannot be withdrawn without special permission of the government under a new emergency decree which places all traffic in foreign exchange payments to foreign creditors under Reichsbank supervision.

Settlement of futures accounts on the Berlin Boerse at the end of July has been postponed until the end of August. The date of reopening the exchange has not been decided.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—The London exchanges are closed today due to a holiday.

U. S. EXPENSES SHOW GAIN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—(INS)—With one month of the treasury's 1932 fiscal year completed and this is expected to be a 12-month period in which Uncle Sam will make his worst financial showing in history, there were some factors in which experts were finding slight encouragement.

Thirty days of the month figures for which were available showed a total loss of $11,000,000 in receipts and an increase of $47,000,000 in general expenditures. Receipts were $113,585,555 and general expenditures $309,209,807.

However, of the two items which were of particularly significance during July, customs receipts of $33,417,050 showed an increase of $7,000,000 over July, 1930. Internal revenue miscellaneous receipts, stimulated by tobacco taxes, amounted to $49,311,095, a reduction of but $8,000,000.

Every-Day Investments

By W. S. COUSINS

International News Service Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—United States government bonds, state bonds and municipal bonds fulfill a double function in the security markets of the country.

First, as a sound, safe vehicle for the employment of the surplus funds of individuals and corporations.

Second, as a form of security or surety for the guaranty of the performance of certain obligations. For example, many of the states require the deposit of bonds as security against state deposits. The bonds are in the state comptroller's vaults and returned to the owner when the deposits are withdrawn. National banks under the old National Bank Act deposited 2 per cent government bonds as security against their note issues. Some cities accept the deposit of their own bonds from contractors as a surety of the prompt and satisfactory completion of their work.

Until the outbreak of the World War and the issuance of Liberty Bonds and Treasury issues, the volume of United States government bonds was negligible, amounting to well under a billion dollars and mostly of the "circulation privilege" variety. These bonds paid only 2 per cent and the banks made an additional 2½ per cent on their circulating notes. A few 4 per cent Panama Canal bonds were held in investment portfolios.

Injection of about 26 billion dollars of United States government war and post-war bonds into the market considerably broadened the field for the "other functions" in home and foreign financing performed by Uncle Sam's bond obligations. England and France used them in payments on war debts. The banks found them excellent investment mediums. The reserve banks by regulating the flow of their own available funds in and out of the bond market, have been able to exercise certain forms of control over general credit conditions.

The Federal Reserve system is the most important reservoir of credit in the country. Its control over credit is exercised in two main factors: first, the raising and lowering of the rediscount rate; second, the injection of credit into the market through the issuance of reserve bank currency and the buying or selling of bankers bills and government bonds.

In the last year or two the reserve system has received criticism and commendation in generous measure, according as its measures have been beneficial or harmful to diversified interests throughout the country. In many cases it was absolutely impossible to please opposing factions, and the reserve banks were doomed to be damned if they do and damned if they don't, take certain courses of action.

When the reserve banks buy Liberty and Treasury bonds in the outside market, they give in exchange gold or reserve bank notes on which the member banks may pyramid bank credit to the amount of about 10 times as much as they receive. In other words, a million dollars in a new Federal Reserve credit in return for government bonds gives the banks a credit base for $10,000,000 in the credit they supply to their customers. The process of calculating this expansion is somewhat complicated, but rests mostly on the regulation which prescribes that member banks must keep in reserve from 7 to 13 per cent of their deposits.

Thus if the reserve banks wished to supply the market with $100,000,000 new credit, they could do so indirectly through the purchase of $10,000,000 Government bonds. Bankers acceptances might be used in the same process, or rediscounts of member banks be increased. However, rediscounting for the member banks might be increased. However, rediscounting for the member banks is a function which must be initiated by the members rather than by reserve banks. In other words, they must wait until they are asked.

Within the last month the reserve banks have increased their purchases of United States Government bonds $100,000,000. The total holdings are $185,781,000. Last year at this time it was $42,900,000.

Are the reserve banks pumping a billion dollars of new credit into the market in furtherance of a governmental plan of mild inflation, or have they some other object in view? Certainly the banks do not need the credit. They are searching for uses for their present loanable funds rather than searching out for more funds in banking operations. Bank funds and investment funds were never so plentiful as they are today.

A more logical conclusion is that the reserve banks are "boosting" the government bond market in an effort to bring new buyers into the bond market from both banking and private sources. A rising bond market near the end of a business depression is always hailed as an important indication of the turning of the tide.

Banking experts believe that the reserve bank heads have been gradually depleting the market of its best grade bonds in order that the so-called institutional investors may be driven into other sections of the market. When buying increases prices rise, and rising prices stimulate a better demand from all sides.

Wall Street Believes High Priced Leaders Are Out of Line

Basing conclusions on the action of the market recently some of the Street's keener observers are of the opinion that accumulation is under way in the better grade low-priced shares which by their remarkable steadiness give evidence of having been completely deflated. Belief in such quarters is that weakness in the so-called leaders is accepted as marking the final phase of the bear market is affording a favorable opportunity for accumulation in the lower-priced descriptions. The tendency now seems to be to compile lists of low-priced shares of merit believed to offer most favorable opportunity for speculative profit with any turn in the business picture. This would seem to suggest at least that Wall street still believes most of the high-priced leaders out of line.

The stock market during July cancelled the best part of the recovery from the June 2 lows, judging from the movement of an average embracing approximately the entire active list. During June, in the course of a natural recovery from the long spring decline, accelerated in the final week by the Hoover moratorium pronouncement, the market scored an average gain of better than 12 per cent. In other words the open market value of all listed stocks increased by $4,882,161,902 to $47,417,147,581. During July, however, stocks showed a contraction of about 7.4 per cent in open market value, or an indicated drop of $3,508,000,000, leaving the total open market value of all listed stocks at the end of the month roughly at $44,000,000,000.

While the steel industry, taking the comment of various leaders in the business at their face, does not hold promise of much improvement during the current month, it is possible to find a favorable straw here and there. It is doubted if output for August will average much above July, while there is a possibility that the rate of mill operations this month may mark the year's low point. Still it is comforting to find some evidence of change for the better in the price situation. Heads of the leading corporations have first pleaded for and then demanded cessation of underselling, and apparently their demands are carrying weight in some directions. At any rate steel prices have been comparatively steady for three weeks now and during the same interval scrap metal prices have shown some semblance of actual betterment.

The Trader in Barron's Weekly says: "Disregarding short-term news and trends and recognizing that the market is a law unto itself, never conforming to the business conditions or speculative sentiment of the moment, it seems logical to assume that a protracted period of accumulation is in sight. Because the short interest and the volume of trading are smaller, and the discouraging second-quarter statements are out of the way, the opportunities are smaller than when the market entered a buying area at the close of May. Then, large-scale buying called the turn. From now out scattered investing from the enormous saving power which is wiping out indebtedness week by week, may be the blotter for whatever liquidation remains to be absorbed."

It is generally recognized in London that the Bank of England's temporary 6 per cent increase in its fiduciary note issue and the arrangement for $50,000,000 in franc credit are leads from strength and not from weakness. They are an invitation to small foreign banks and nervous individuals to withdraw their gold from London if they wish. "The Bank of England's gold reserve is for use and not for ornament," a high authority declared. Actually the new credits, if used, will enable the sterling to be sufficiently supported to make gold exports unprofitable.

While the Texas Legislature is wrestling with the problem of enacting laws that will stabilize the oil and gas industry and effectively conserve these state resources, the movement to voluntarily pinch down wells in East Texas is gaining headway. It is indicated that by the end of this week enough producers will have signed the agreement to curtail their production as to warrant giving it a trial. Although there were 88 newly completed wells in East Texas last week producing 92,731 barrels initial, an encouraging sign was seen in the comparatively small number of new permits for drilling, the record showing only 22. The railroad commission is making little if any pretense of enforcing its proration order in that area and the total daily average for the week is largely a matter of guess work. It is placed as high as 625,000 barrels by some unofficial reports.

Drop in Pipe Demand Hurts Pittsburgh Steel

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

DEMAND FOR THE PRODUCTS made by the Pittsburgh Steel Company has been more sharply reduced during the past two years than for other types of steel. This accounted for the sharp decline in earnings and for the discontinuance of preferred dividend payments.

The company makes seamless tubing and wire products. Most of the tubing is sold to the oil industry and to the automobile trade. The overproduced condition of the oil business has been responsible for a sharp reduction in sales of drill pipe and casing. Automobile production has been materially curtailed and this has had a proportionate effect on purchases of the sizes of tubing used for parts.

Pittsburgh Steel does not make the types of tubing ordinarily used for pipe lines so that it did not share in the one kind of pipe business which was active until a short time ago.

The market for wire products and nails has been unsatisfactory for a considerable period of time. As a result of this combination of circumstances, the earnings of Pittsburgh Steel reflected the depressed condition of business sooner than those of other large steel companies.

Omission of Dividend

THE OMISSION OF THE QUARTERLY preferred dividend, which ordinarily would be paid on September 1, followed similar action on the common dividend at the close of 1930. After a lapse of several years the common stock was placed on a $4 annual basis with the payment of a quarterly dividend of $1 on January 2, 1929. This rate was continued until October 1, 1930, when the quarterly dividend was cut to 50 cents. No common dividend has been paid since that time.

The company operated at a loss in the last fiscal year and failed to cover its common dividend requirements in the preceding year. The net loss for the year ended June 30, 1931, was $1,765,637 after deducting all charges. This compared with a profit of $1,689,692, which was equivalent to $3.77 a common share in the previous fiscal year and with a profit of $4,535,437 or $15 a share in the year ended June 30, 1929.

Surplus Reduced

THE PAYMENT OF DIVIDENDS together with adjustments for the abandonment of equipment was responsible for a total reduction of $2,792,331 in the surplus account during the last fiscal year.

The financial position is good with current assets over 12 times current liabilities. In spite of this, however, there were several factors which undoubtedly influenced the directors in their decision to defer action on the dividend. Sinking fund requirements on the 6 per cent debenture bonds amount to $500,000 annually. This combined with dividend requirements on 104,750 shares of 7 per cent preferred stock would result in a heavy drain on cash resources if the depression in earnings should last for any protracted period of time.

To Retain Cash

PIPE MANUFACTURING PROCESSES have been undergoing rapid changes during recent years. While these developments have not affected the types of pipe made by Pittsburgh Steel, it is quite likely that directors wish to maintain a strong cash position in order to make plant changes if such a step becomes desirable in the future.

The construction of a by-product coke plant is one improvement which has been under consideration.

Wabash Would Sell $10,000,000 in Notes

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Wabash Railway has asked Interstate Commerce Commission authority to pledge certain stocks and bonds as collateral for $10,000,000 in short-term notes, which it proposes to issue.

The road is negotiating a $10,000,000 loan to be taken by a group of banks in order to provide for the repayment of $8,450,000 of notes now outstanding to banks in New York City and St. Louis. Funds also will provide for the meeting of cash requirements to July 1, 1932, for operations, sinking fund and limited capital expenditures estimated at about $1,550,000.

Mother Explains That Dolly Ended Life in River

CHAPTER XXXIII

The old scrubwoman didn't answer me directly when I asked if Dolly Hawkins was her daughter.

She had turned pale for a moment—seemed speechless.

It was rather an inane thing to ask, when she told me it was a photograph of her daughter, only it was such a shock to me to discover this that I made the query more an exclamation of surprise.

"So," she said quietly as if talking more to herself—"that was why I felt called to get up earlier and try and save you from Malvern."

"What do you mean?"

"Many's the time I've felt sorry for silly girls who put their trust in Malvern, but never before did I feel called upon to try and stop them. With you it was different. Something urged me—something almost told me Dolly needed to get up and save you, and now I understand it."

She drew up her chair and sat down heavily.

"It was from God. It was a message from God. It meant that at last I would meet someone who knew me. Dolly—my poor little girl. You will tell me all about her."

"Why—there isn't much to tell, honestly. I knew her. We were friends for a while——"

"For a while." Her voice almost a wail. "Why did you stop being friends? Why didn't you help her? Did you scorn her because she made a misstep?"

"Why—why, Mrs. Hawkins," I cried, aghast at the thought. "I didn't know. I couldn't help her—she just disappeared."

DOLLY DEAD

"You didn't know what?"

I felt as though she was cross-questioning me.

It embarrassed me, too. She had said that Dolly made a misstep. I knew well enough what she meant, for I knew that Dolly had been wild and foolish. I stopped going with her after I found out about Major Boyden and what Dolly meant by getting me a rich sugar daddy.

"You said she—she made a misstep," I managed to say.

"Didn't you know it before?"

"No. I knew nothing, she just disappeared," I answered determined not to tell her all that I had suspicioned of Dolly.

"How did you happen to know her? Can't you see I am hungry for information, for anything about little Dolly. Just to see and talk with someone who was her friend is wonderful. I knew nothing at all only her little letter, her presents and holiday raids and once a year, for the three years she was away, she came home on Thanksgiving. On the fourth Thanksgiving she—she didn't come home."

Mrs. Hawkins hesitated and then, with an effort, she said: "She couldn't come home to me that year, she was dead."

"Dolly is dead?" I cried.

I knew that she must be dead from the way the old woman spoke of her in the past tense, saying that Dolly "was" her daughter.

"Yes, dearie. Now tell me about her. How did you meet her? What did she say and do? Who did she go around with? Was she happy? How did she look?"

I told her about meeting Dolly when I went to work at Hunter's Department Store.

LIES ABOUT FRIEND

"Dolly was at the counter for expensive perfumes," I explained.

Mrs. Hawkins nodded understandingly.

"Yes, I know that. She wrote me all about that. She was so pretty that they would put her right there. Sometimes she sent me a little vial of perfume, but I never was one for that sort of thing. Beauty isn't in cosmetics and aromas, it is in Christian living."

She stopped sharply and then nodded for me to go on.

I used to go about with her, but a little. I have stayed with her at her apartment once or twice.

I nearly said "apartment" and I knew very well that Dolly never could afford the wonderful apartment she had on her store salary.

"Was it a nice room?" she asked eagerly.

"Oh, yes, pleasant and sunny, not too expensive. She had your picture, and a few books and a fern. It was nice," I said.

I was trying to help the old heartbroken mother, trying to paint a comforting picture for her, and I am sure my lies about the room are all forgiven.

"Dolly would do that, she loved flowers and sunshine."

"We got some pretty dresses once, she with her beautiful jet black hair and me with my rotten-colored hair, looked cute together, all our friends said."

"What sort of friends?"

"Girls in the store—some of the young men who worked there. We'd go out now and then, to movies and a little dance."

"That was my Dolly all over. She loved dancing, she loved gaiety and liveliness and beautiful things. She used to get materials cheap in the store and make wonderful dresses herself—but I suppose you did that too."

"Oh, yes," I said, rather lamely.

I knew all about Dolly's dresses. They were much better than any that Hunter's department store carried, and she never made a dress for herself.

"Didn't she ever confide in you?"

"Why, yes, about little things."

"Didn't she have some steady sweetheart?"

DIED IN RIVER

"Oh, yes," I said, and then I was sorry.

"You knew him?"

"Yes—er—no—that is——"

"Oh, dearie, for the first time you are lying to me. Don't, for God's sake, don't lie. I want the truth. I can stand anything now. You knew her sweetheart and you are afraid to tell me who he is."

I had never seen such piteous, helpless misery in all my life as sat there before me, embodied in that toil-worn old scrubwoman.

"You haven't told me anything about Dolly?" I reminded her, hoping to get her to change the subject.

"Haven't you guessed?"

"Perhaps she—perhaps it was I suppose the poor dear died in a hospital," I managed to say.

"She died out there," she made a gesture, "in the East River."

Oh!" I exclaimed in horror. "Oh, an—an accident!"

Dolly Hawkins' mother shook her head.

"There is no use trying to believe that, dearie. I might as well tell you. I had a cousin on the police force here, he died a while ago. When Dolly didn't come home on Thanksgiving or write to me, I wrote to this cousin to see if he could help me. Dolly always got her mail at a sub station and I didn't know her room address.

"A week later he, this policeman cousin, went for me. He told me as best he could. He took me to the morgue. It was Dolly and—and they had learned that her condition—why she did it. My cousin advised me to give another name, not to shame our relatives up state. So I we we buried her in Brooklyn. It was in the papers, a little item, but we used the name Mary Blake."

She didn't cry, she just stared into her teacup as if she was long past tears, or hope, or wanting to live.

TELLS ABOUT MALVERN

I watched her but my mind was almost in a whirl. I was remembering things. I was recalling how annoyed Forrest got whenever I used to wonder what had become of Dolly Hawkins, and she had boasted that he was her sugar daddy and that she would marry him soon or know the reason why—all that came flooding back in my mind.

I put my hand on the old lady's arm.

"I understand a great deal now—it was through your daughter that I first met Mr. Malvern——"

Her arm shot out as if to push me away. Her eyes were wide with horror.

"Don't say that—don't say that. Such a beast——"

She seemed to choke.

"You wanted to know," I reminded her.

"But—but that man! I thought it might have been some young chap—an unwise love affair. I won't believe you!"

"Dolly's picture has a prominent place on the wall in his den among a score of pictures of other girls. He used to be with her all her spare time, he would call at the store for her with his car. I have been out on parties with them—she—she told me that he was in love with her and she truly expected him to marry her—she told me so over and over!"

The old woman looked at me with an odd expression. She got up and held out the Bible.

"Put your hand on it, dearie, and tell me all you just said is true!"

I put my hand on the book.

"All I said about Dolly and Mr. Malvern is true," I repeated.

"God bless you—bless you always. And now go home, dearie, go home—I must find a verse in the Bible!"

DAILY SHORT STORY

'Skeery Thompson'

Bootlegger Is Arrested for Offering Graft

"Golly," said Peter Barnes, "but you certainly moved into one swell neighborhood, Joe."

"Yeah," said Joe.

"Not but what your shack is pretty swell itself, Joe, only I was getting an eyefull of that big estate across the way."

Joe Clark eyed his friend suspiciously. They had been colaborers a decade before this in an odiferous fish factory down on Taukman Point. Peter Barnes had got a little ahead of Joe through sheer industry and an inborn dislike for liquor.

They had made him a factory foreman and the trust had sent him down to a Texas port to run one of their factories. Peter and Joe had not met again during the ten or a dozen years until this day in the city.

Both men were considerably surprised, each at the signs of improvement and prosperity in the other.

Peter explained that he had invented some new processes for extracting oils, poultry feed and fertilizer from the fish and as a result had bought stock in the trust.

"Yep, Joe," he said as they sat in a corner of a business men's lunch room down town. "I sort of struck it rich. I even learned to like cocktails and highballs."

"Just a minute, Pal," Joe broke in, delighted at this piece of news. He motioned to the waiter and said, "Two, with carbonic."

The highballs were brought.

"They sell liquor rather openly in New York," Peter said.

"They sell liquor openly everywhere. There's only one class of people who cannot see that a drop is being so'd——"

"Of course the blind people, but——"

BOTH PROSPEROUS

"Yep, Pete, the blind, the pious fanatics who would swear they were choking with dust if they fell into the middle of the Atlantic, and a certain portion of the so-called dry agents. So you're sitting pretty, eh?"

"Well, I am an official in the big trust with an office in Jacksonville and another in Galveston, and somebody to do my work. I got a home in Florida and another for summer up in Michigan where I was born, and I have a wife and some kids and can't kick. Some different from working knee-deep in fish scraps in the old days, hey, Joe?"

"Some different."

"You haven't done so poorly yourself—what's your line, Joe?"

"Marine. I own a few lines of rather speedy tubs and keep pretty busy."

"Fish line?"

"No, general freight."

"Freight steamers cost money, how come you got money enough for several liners? When I knew you, you had only the price of a quart a week."

"Oh, I sort of worked my way up. Come out to my shack for dinner—I'll show you. It's out on the North shore of the sound."

"Oh, I don't know—your wife might not like it. She didn't used to care to have you bring any of the boys home."

Joe smiled.

MARRIED RICH GIRL

"She's in Europe with my daughters, but that doesn't matter anyway, I have a sort of a cook."

So they went out to his "shack," a $50,000 place with a six-car garage and servant, a cottage. They had enjoyed an excellent dinner and were sitting on the wide terrace of Joe's place when Pete spoke of the "classy" neighbors.

"Lost in the gulf aboard a tanker. Say, remember 'Skeery Thompson?' He used to be our timekeeper, remember? If you said 'Boo' to him he'd break away and run."

"Skeery's doing pretty well."

"Still keeping books I suppose?"

"Not exactly. He's retired."

"On what, a pension?"

"Naw, he isn't as old as we are, Pete, no it wasn't exactly a pension."

"But he was so dumb, honest, he was too dumb to live, Joe."

"Yeah, we sort of considered him dumb. He married the Tate girl, remember? Her old man owned a lot of property out there on Taukman Point, blocks and stores and land and stuff."

"Sure I remember, Joe—Golly but—that Tate girl was one Pippin—never would look at us. Now how the devil could such a dumb boob as Skeery Thompson ever get the nerve and the courage to propose to that swell Tate girl?"

"I don't know. All I know is that he did marry her and we wouldn't believe it until we knocked off work and went over and hung around the church and saw 'em come out. That was about a year after you went down to Texas."

"Oh well, I guess we made good with our own brains, Joe. Anybody can retire if he marries himself a rich wife."

"Skeery seemed to manage to get a big fortune without very much help from Old Man Tate, or his wife's money."

"But he couldn't, Joe, he was too damn dumb to ache."

"He seemed pretty dumb, suppose I tell you about it. I'm on the inside."

"Sure shoot. Oh, boy, there goes one of those Eyetalian cars two blocks long into that place over there."

"Yeah, they got six of 'em, and some cheap little five thousand dollar cars for their servants—but let me tell you about Skeery Thompson. It seems his wife didn't want him to be a bookkeeper in a flax factory after she married him, so her old man said he'd go to Washington and see what he could do. The daughter thought she wanted to live in Washington. Well, sir, old man Tate had a lot of pull in Washington, he must have, for he got Skeery appointed as a sort of supervisor of a certain district right here—you know, a supervisor of a district and a flock of dry agents."

"Dry agents? You mean Skeery Thompson had the guts to go into that line?"

"Sure did."

"Graft?"

"Skeery? Listen, Pete, he was too skeery to take a penny. Honest, when he came out here and started to look around, a certain party went to him and said that he had some boats coming in straight from St. Pierre, and they were loaded with the McCoy—"

ARRESTS SUSPECT

"Huh?"

"The real goods, top-grade liquor. He told Skeery that his boats were going to unload in Elbow Cove, down below the Point, and he would appreciate it if he would send all of his men over on the north shore on a wild goose chase that night. When he got up to go he left an envelope. Skeery ripped it open and found 10 grand in it, and what did he do?"

"Kept it," Pete said.

"Like hell he did."

"He'd be just dump enough."

"He leaped up and grabbed this man and took him up to the big chief and told him what had happened."

"Well, Skeery Thompson was dumber than I thought."

"Yeah? Listen. The big chief said he would attend to this man and reported at once to Washington that at last he had an incorruptible supervisor. Well, old man Tate, Thompson's wife's father, passed on, and it was found that his fortune was mostly shot—he didn't leave nothing much but debts and chicken feed. Did Thompson accept any bribes? He did not."

"But how could the sap make good?" Those lads don't get enough salary to keep a chorus girl in cigarets."

"Lottery."

"Lottery?"

"That's what I said. Pete lottery tickets."

"But for gosh sake, you don't call that anything but luck, do you?"

"I don't know, do you? Anyway, listen. It seems that a feller Thompson knew went to him and sold him a lottery ticket for a buck. He tells Thompson that it's illegal and to tell no one if he wins.

"Well, he won—he won $15,000. His friend brought him the cash and sold him another. That second week his lottery ticket won an even ten grand. And then this friend said, 'Look here, Mr. Thompson, why did you take Smithy off those three breweries, watching the handling of the de-alcoholing?'

"Well, Pete, Skeery Thompson told him he thought the man was crooked. The friend said: 'He's straight, put him back, will you—and by the way, here's another lottery ticket.'

GIVEN ADVICE

"Well, sir, Skeery Thompson bought the ticket and darned if it didn't win again." This man said to Skeery, "Listen, Mr. Thompson, I'm going to have a lottery ticket to sell you every week, and from the way your luck's been running, I think you will always win."

"Well, sir, at first Thompson asks him how he can guess that if the lottery isn't phoney and this man says 'Who says it isn't phoney or that there's more'n one ticket?' And by the way, Mr. Thompson, couldn't you put Smithy back on the old job watching the breweries? And I wish you'd keep Hanrahan on the job off the point, and furthermore, if I was winning so much in a lottery I'd sort of bank my money in some other name, some other place, for the sake of the looks of things. And then Skeery Thompson got wise'."

"Didn't I tell you he was dumb?" Pete said.

"Aw' hell, Pete, he just pretended to get wise, he was wise all th' time and playin' for 20 grand every week. He's retired now and while I'm satisfied that I got plenty, he's got several times plenty, you see I wasn't th' only guy who was handin' him something—"

"You?" Pete asked and then he grinned. "Sure, your line of boats and your line of freight—I get you—say, who's that swell coming out of the big mansion across there—he looks sort of familiar—is he the guy who owns that 500-acre place and them six foreign cars and everything?"

"Sure, Pete—that's Skeery Thompson, hisself!"

The Judiciary Campaign

Many Voters Candidates Urge Direct Attention to the Election Only Good Men on the Bench

There is danger in a political campaign like that now under way, in which interest centers so largely in the contest for a few of the major offices, that the importance of some of the other places to be filled may be overlooked by the voters and unworthy candidates permitted by the people's indifference to win election.

There seemed not long ago to be danger that the voters would be so engrossed in the County Commissioners' race that they would give scant attention to the judiciary campaign. But that danger now appears to have passed.

With seven places to be filled on the Common Pleas bench and eight in the County Court, such a multiplicity of candidates has come forward that it will be impossible for the voters to lose sight of the judiciary race. Fortunately, too, there are among the candidates a number of bold, outspoken men whose earnest efforts give assurance that the issues will be fearlessly discussed.

The foremost issue is: the courts are to be controlled by judges who stand independent of the gang politicians, or by gang judges who, backed by the gang politicians on the bench, will take orders from the gang bosses. If there need be no expectation that fellow members of the gang brought before them for trial for election frauds, gambling, racketeering and malfeasance, the manner in which the gang specializes will receive severe sentences.

Suppression of these crimes is a crying need for the city. To contribute to the same end, relief from many of the evils with which the community is afflicted, not the least of which is high taxes.

Another of the issues is the Common Pleas Court procedure is to be changed, as, for instance, by elimination of the long summer suspension, so that litigants will not have to wait two years for their cases to come to trial.

The voters will do well to ignore judiciary slates. The candidates should be considered individually on their merits and without regard to their association with other candidates.

The action of the seven judges who are running together on a "one for all and all for one" platform is deplorable, since it tends to dissuade the voters from considering the candidates separately. No doubt this "band of brothers" united in the hope that the strong would help to pull through the weak. But it is not in the public interest that the weak should be pulled through.

Out of Step

Pittsburgh's Lack of Uniformity in Traffic Regulations May Be Responsible for Accidents

After thorough study the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety prepared a model municipal traffic ordinance. It has been adopted by many cities and towns, but Pittsburgh is not among them.

Now comes a suggestion that our lack of uniformity in traffic regulations is responsible for some of our fatal automobile accidents.

Lewis W. McIntyre, chief engineer of the Bureau of Traffic Planning, offers some impressive figures in support of the theory. He tells us that 68 deaths in motor mishaps in Pittsburgh last year involved out-of-town drivers. These accidents constituted more than 35 per cent of the total. It seems not at all improbable, as Mr. McIntyre suggests, that the out-of-town drivers' lack of familiarity with our regulations may have been to blame for some of these fatalities.

The figures are an argument in favor of Pittsburgh's getting into step with the other cities in matters of traffic regulation.

Europe at Cut Rates!

Sharp Cost Reductions Will Be Made by Steamship Companies to Encourage Tourist Trade

The proposed cut of 10 to 30 per cent in steamship passenger rates to Europe is of more than passing importance.

Continuance of the depression this summer radically cut into the profitable foreign tourist trade, which had been becoming an increasingly important means of settling international balances of payment.

For example, during 1930, when the tourist trade was still flourishing, expenditures of American visitors overseas amounted to more than one-fourth of the total value represented by our merchandise imports.

As long as the lure of travel persisted, Europe found a way to pay interest on her debts by permitting American tourists to gain visual impressions of art works at the Louvre in Paris, at the Pitti and Uffizzi galleries in Florence, and at the great cathedrals throughout the continent.

The balance of American tourist expenditures abroad reached a sum three times as large as the Allied debt payments to the United States Treasury.

In 1929, when war debt payments reached $212,000,000, net tourist spendings amounted to $659,000,000, which incidentally were larger than the total interest payments due on long term private investments held in this country.

In the light of the cold figures, it is apparent that it is more important for Europe to woo back the American tourists than to get a moratorium on war debt payments.

The great steamship companies have been among the chief sufferers from the bear market in trans-Atlantic travel. They have undertaken to limit losses by inaugurating week-end cruises.

The sharp rate reductions, beginning on August 17, are intended to reawaken the demand for tourist travel.

It brings the tariff for trans-Atlantic travel nearer the pre-war level.

It should bring into the group of potential travelers many who hitherto felt that they could not afford the luxury.

Although European travel has received the bulk of the publicity, Canada has quietly taken ever increasing proportions of the American tourist trade. Motor travel to Canada increased by one-fifth last summer.

To encourage travel at home, the tourist companies have passed along economies which make comparable vacations at least 6 per cent cheaper than a year ago.

Those with means are taking advantage of the quiet period in business to get the stimulus which comes from pleasure travel.

No gloom psychology should be allowed to discourage those who are financially able from availing themselves of the joys of tourism.

Pull Up the Roots!

By Nelson Harding

The monstrous growth that's spreading out
And winding branches all about
The institutions of our land
And twining 'round the very hand

Is deeply rooted in our soil
And no cure for it will be found
Until uprooted from the ground.

Wage Cutting

By Claude G. Bowers

President Hoover is to be commended for his announcement that the Administration has not changed its position on wage reductions. While the Administration's opinion on the subject is not compelling on industries, an announcement from any of its spokesmen indicating a justification for wage reductions would be eagerly welcomed by those who would like to reduce. But when the President adds that "no member of the Administration has expressed the view or holds the view that the policy of the Administration in advocating the maintenance of wages would be changed," he ignores the letter of Secretary Lamont. No matter what Mr. Lamont's intent, it is not without reason that the general interpretation of the press was wavering.

Just as the President makes his denial of a change in attitude Mark Sullivan, who is recognized as the reflector of the President's views, writes the paper he represents that labor is "reasonable" and "conciliatory" on the subject of wage reductions under certain conditions. This, on top of the Lamont letter, certainly indicates some weakening in the demand that wages be maintained.

* * *

Labor Is 'Reasonable' About Wage Reductions

According to Mr. Sullivan, labor is "reasonable" about wage reductions when industries making or proposing them first cut dividends and the salaries of the executives. He makes the point that much has been done by maintaining wages "until the cost of living went down"—implying that when the cost of living goes down wages may be reduced with propriety. Aside from the fact that there has been a slashing of wages before the cost of living went down, this suggestion is unfortunate. It implies that, since the cost of living has gone down, the wages may now be cut. Coming from Mr. Sullivan, the correspondent, this means nothing more than an individual opinion; but coming from the bosom friend of the President and a frequent guest at Rapidan, a greater significance may be attached to the statement.

However, the President denies that he has changed his position, and this is well.

Attempt to Cut Wages Will Be Fought

Meanwhile the United States Steel Corporation has reduced dividends and salaries of the officers. It could not cut the wages of the workers without inviting criticism. Too many millions of dollars in bonuses to the officials have been granted in the not remote past—millions that could have been used as an insurance fund against wage cuts and unemployment.

Meanwhile wages have been cut in great numbers of industries, and organized labor is girding its loins for a struggle. The Railroad Labor Executive Association has made its position clear. If conditions necessitate, it favors an increase in freight rates; but it objects to the suggestion that wages should also be reduced. It insists that the railroad workers, even now, are not paid proportionately with other workers in other industries requiring no more skill. The implication is that any attempt to cut wages will be fought—and a railroad strike at this juncture is the last thing we want.

When McAdoo took over the management of the roads during the war he found the wages ridiculously low and raised them all along the line. That invited general abuse; but had he been nominated for President in 1924 the railroads would not have wanted to meet him upon that issue. He was loaded.

Number of Strikes Increasing

Meanwhile the number of strikes is increasing. The Division of Conciliation of the Labor Department has been asked to act during the last six months in 447 cases, involving 132,273 workers. The silk strike at Paterson, which is growing ugly, and has been ascribed by the press to the Communistic influences, has now been joined by the conservative unions that are fighting Communism. The strikes in the coal fields are becoming more bitter in temper. A general reduction in wages will certainly be followed by new strikes. And a great number of strikes, along with unemployment in the dead of winter, will not be good either for business or government.

It is to be hoped that industries will take note of the President's repudiation of the letter of Mr. Lamont.

The Time When—

Again we pause to wonder what the Young Moderns would think if they could remember the time

When the bold "Rainy Daisies" shocked the world and horrified Mrs. Grundy by walking brazenly down Main Street wearing skirts "way up almost to their shoe-tops."

* * *

When the Boy Friend was called "Best Beau" and brought a box of chocolates instead of a pocket-flask. And Father came down and wound the library clock and politely sent him home if he stayed after 11 o'clock.

When a girl took almost an hour to "do up her hair" instead of just running a comb through her bob or her permanent . . . and bragged that it came down way below her knees.

* * *

When every woman shampooed her own hair on Sunday morning—and hung it out of the back window to dry. And the back-view of an apartment house looked like a conclave of mermaids.

* * *

When a woman who lit a cigarette in a restaurant was promptly and coldly ordered by the head waiter to extinguish it; because "ladies" were not permitted to smoke in "proper" places.

* * *

When a girl who dared to touch up her hair with henna or peroxide was called a "bleached blonde" and suspected of being a bit "fast."

When ladies wore pads on their hips in order to give that rotund effect so essential to beauty. And girls wore starched ruffles under their blouses to produce that "pleasantly plump" effect which men so much admired. Ha-ha!

* * *

When, if a man sent you anything except books, candy or flowers, you promptly returned it, with a gracious, regretful note.

When a man in love would walk to the office and go without lunch for a week in order to buy a girl box-seats and vintage champagne on Saturday evening.

When every High School boy had a definite goal and ambition in life, and expected to "make good," get married and settle down. Ho-hum!

FRANCE DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

MARSEILLES, Aug. 3.—Next to Paris this is the largest and most tumultuous city in France and perhaps the most colorful seaport in the world. Caesar once stormed its gates. The uncomfortable journey here on the worst train I ever rode upon was inspired solely to fulfill an ambition of adolescence.

I wanted to see the Chateau d'If near by and scene of Alexander Dumas' novel, "The Count of Monte Cristo." No story in boyhood impressed me so vividly and it was thrilling to visit the old fortress in a motor boat and prowl about the prison and famous black holes.

Joseph Conrad found Marseilles the most interesting spot in his sea rovings and Edmond Rostand lived here solely because of scenic charm. Few Paris streets have the robust vitality of Marseilles' leading street, the famous Canebiere, with its wild clatter of huge horse drawn lorries.

The city spreads at the water edge in a vast semi-circle. Along the coast is the celebrated Corniche, twisting and turning in a far-flung panorama, and from a table in front of Restaurant Basso on the Qual des Belges the flowing human tide surpasses that passing the Cafe de la Paix.

We saw bare-foot Lascars, Africans, Chinese, pock-marked Malays, one-eyed Hindus, and all the hairy chested polyglot that goes down to sea in ships. Also neat ankled girls with "eyes for sailors," tanned explorers with pith helmets, monocled dandies, vague old women, ship officers, beefy Dutch colonizers, etc., etc. A striking pageant.

Each morning and evening some ship touches Marseilles after a 32-day journey from Shanghai, Bombay or where-not and as the result there is an eager air. Every other moment a sudden puff of sidewalk drama among swaying throngs.

It differs from Paris in lack of the exquisite beauty of dress-making salons, perfume parlors, jewelry establishments and the like. Marseilles is confined to such blunt and unprosaic pursuits as making cement, lime and dye. By contrast it seems cold, hard, suggesting the song, smelling of blood, to which it gave its name.

* * *

The some 800,000 population is perhaps the most unusual mixture to be found the world over. Seamen from all ports come here, marry and as a result of this mingling some of the oddest types of physiognomy are seen. Our waiter, for instance, was almost coal black, yet his hair was straight and red and his eyes a sky blue. A neighborly table-mate who has been voyaging on P. & O. liners for 18 years told us that save for Harbin in Russia there was no city on the globe offering such a racial fusion.

* * *

Naturally, one must dip into the famous dish of Marseilles here—bouillabaisse. It is a soupy mixture swimming with all sorts of chopped up fish. Food fanciers find it the inspiration for ecstatic gurgling, but after a couple of gulps it tastes like a week ago last Tuesday. I tried it in Paris at Prunier's years ago and with the same distaste. The French discreetly call fish poisson.

* * *

But in Marseilles I snagged on the most elegant dessert in Europe. I was attracted by the name—Creme Americaine—and the only other choices being raw peaches or cheese I gave it a twirl. It was a sort of Kirch spiced custard souffle with a sugary crust. Upon ordering a second helping the waiter looked startled and I passed it up. I was glad for a single order created a digestive dungaree all evening.

* * *

Others doubtless have written of Marseilles shop clerks. As types they are as distinct as the red-cheeked black-aproned wine waiters in Paree. They parade at noon and are cut from the identical pattern—dapper, pinch waisted and with fly-sized black mustaches and gay ribboned straw hats. Each suggests a Clarence-off-the-Pickle-Boat in a mincing, mignon way.

* * *

There is something don't-carish in the languid air of Mediterranean coast towns. From rosy morning until late this evening where from my window Marseilles has burst out in a fairyland of trembling lights I have not given a single thought to Russian wheat dumping, South American bond defaults or other pressing world ills.

* * *

In such a pliable mood I permitted a spade bearded barber with a pincnez to give me an egg shampoo before departing. There was too much yolk or something, for a half hour later I found myself a decided straw blonde, for the love of goodness!

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

You want to be understood. And people don't understand you. Then you're mad, or hurt—

But why? Why should you expect busy people to drop their other work and understand you?

Understanding anyone is a full-time job. You don't even understand yourself. You have never studied sufficiently to unravel the mystery of your own behavior. Yet you expect the other chap to solve that mystery at a glance. Now, I ask you, is that sense? Or just a lot of unreasonable conceit?

And even if other people could understand you, would that bring you happiness? You're sure it would. You're certain that they would be kinder to you if they understood you, and would like you more—

Maybe. But there's also a chance that they'd DISLIKE you more. For, remember, stranger, if they uncover your hidden virtues, they'll also uncover your hidden vices.

On the whole, you're lucky that people DON'T understand you. GETTING UNDERSTOOD IS LIKE GOING NUDIST . . . IT'S LIKELY TO PROVE A TERRIBLE SHOCK.

As a matter of fact, it isn't other people's lack of understanding that is making a mess of your life . . . that gets you in messes . . . that makes you lonely, bewildered, peevish and blue.

IT'S YOUR OWN LACK OF UNDERSTANDING OF YOURSELF AND THE WORLD IN WHICH YOU LIVE.

If you could understand yourself, you wouldn't create situations that require the understanding of others. And you'd be so busy trying to wrangle yourself into shape that you'd have no time to bother about public opinion.

Don't go around toting a grouch because people don't understand you. Ask yourself if you're worth understanding . . . and why you do fool things that need understanding. Ask yourself, also, if you understand others. You expect tact and tolerance . . . you feel that people should perceive the lovely motives beneath your nitwit acts. But do you extend tact and tolerance to others? Do you assume that their motives are lovely when their acts are anything but?

Understand yourself . . . that's your first duty. And your second duty is even more important . . . FORGET YOURSELF. Stop thinking that your personal progress, your personal happiness is the biggest thing in life. Realize that you are but one small incident in the midst of infinite mysteries and miracles, romances and adventures. You are a part of that living marvel. Then act as if you were a part, and quit being a hangnail.

With all that endless wonder to explore, you have a nerve to demand that people shall use their time and energy in understanding YOU!

CHEMISTRY'S BEGINNINGS

By Archibald Henderson

If we attempt to trace the science of chemistry, through its forerunner alchemy, back to the earliest beginnings, we find metallurgy occupying the first place. The discovery and opening of the tomb of Tut-ankh-Amen in the Valley of the Kings a decade ago was a revelation to the entire world. The variety of decoration, ornament, and utensil; the beauty of the adornment; the exquisite workmanship—all revealed the very high state of development reached by the Egyptians in the science and art of metallurgy.

Chemistry is commonly thought of as a science dealing with substances, elements, acids, explosives, gases and what not. At bottom all this means only that chemistry is a science which deals essentially with the changes in composition that matter may undergo. It was many centuries before people realized that there could be such a thing as a special science of chemistry. Down through the ages, this art and that craft were developed, and knowledge of a very scattered and heterogeneous sort gradually accumulated. Late in the history of the human race all this heterogeneous mass of information was accumulated, and the dawn of the science of chemistry was heralded.

There are many fantastic theories regarding the beginnings of chemistry. It is argued that Moses must have had a knowledge of chemistry, as evidenced by the treatment of the golden calf. Tubal Cain is accepted on Biblical authority as a past-master in the science of the chemistry of metals. It has even been argued that Cleopatra was adept in chemical lore, since she dissolved pearls in vinegar—although we now know that pearls will not dissolve in vinegar. In his "Makers of Chemistry," Holmyard cites somewhat derisively the theory that the Golden Fleece, which Jason and the Argonauts carried over the Pontic Sea to Colchis, was only a manuscript on parchment, teaching the manner of making gold by chemical art.

Not a little is known of the history and civilization of Egypt as far back as the year 3400 B. C. This extraordinary and highly developed civilization endured for more than 30 centuries. An amazingly high level of excellence was attained by Egyptians in early days in such primitive arts as those of the metallurgist, the glassmaker, the dyer, and other artisans. Copper ores were particularly studied and sought; and ingenious processes were devised for extracting the metal. Elaborate drawings or rather pictures have been found, showing in detail the scientific procedure of metal workers in their workshops in Egypt. The extraction of metals became monopolies of the courts, the management of the mines being placed in the hands of the highest officials, even of the sons of Pharaoh. The chemical secrets and metallurgical processes were naturally kept secret. In view of the close association between the Egyptian royal family and the priestly caste, this probably justifies the tradition that chemistry first saw the light in the laboratories of Egyptian priests.
